A PUBLIC BOON

So widely-spread and far-reaching is the influence of Beecham's Pills upon the health of the people that it is possible without exaggeration to refer to them as a Public Boon. The mere fact that they have stood the test of publicity for so many years is good evidence of their value. No amount of advertising will alone enable a proprietary medicine, or anything else, to maintain its popularity decade after decade. It must possess absolute merit. And there is no question as to the merit of Beecham's Pills. Everywhere you can find testimony to their curative value. In the better health, more buoyant spirits, and brighter lives of countless numbers is to be seen proof of the excellence of

BEECHAM'S PILLS.

Sold everywhere in boxes, price 1/1½ (56 pills) and 2/9 (168 pills).

FOR STUDENTS.—Competitions in Freehand Drawing, French, etc., for Irish Boys and Girls. See the Student's Page of the WEEKLY IRISH TIMES. On Sale To-day. Price Twopence.

CHEAPER HOUSES
THAT WILL STAND THE TEST OF TIME.

THIS is accomplished by using the "AUSTRALIA" CONCRETE CAVITY WALLING SYSTEM. More houses have been erected in Ireland during the past two years by this system than all other types of building construction put together.

Mr. G. A. Tonkin, C.E., the Inventor of the Australia Concrete Block-making Machine, the Tonkin Mixer, and the Speedy Crusher has now joined us in Ireland and will be in attendance at the Works daily, where any of these machines can be seen in operation.

We shall also be pleased to quote for T Blocks, Slabs, Quoins, &c., Fencing Posts, Kerbs, or any other type of pre cast concrete. No concrete problems are beyond our ability.

UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS.

PERIODS FOR PAYMENT IN NORTHERN IRELAND.

The third special period for the payment of unemployment benefit will end on 1st November next, and in some cases claimants have unfortunately already exhausted the full amount of benefit to which they are entitled in that period. Exactly the same provision has been made in Northern Ireland as in Great Britain for the payment of a total of 22 weeks' benefit in the period of seven months ending 1st November next, and where claimants had a sufficient credit of contributions they were able to draw 20 weeks' continuous benefit, followed by a gap of one week, before the two remaining weeks could be drawn. As the 5th April last was the first date on which this benefit became payable, some claimants had received their full weeks' benefit by the 15th September, and are consequently ineligible for further benefit until 2nd November next—a period of seven weeks. This period without benefit is, of course, reduced in the case of claimants who did not come on to benefit until after the 5th April last.

The large majority of claimants, however, had no credit of contributions at the commencement of the third special period, and in their case the Act provided that the 22 weeks' benefit could only be paid in periods of five weeks each, followed by intervals of five weeks, during which no benefit was paid. These intervals were subsequently reduced to one week as from 20th July last. The effect of imposing these gaps in the case of uncovenanted persons was to spread the 22 weeks' benefit over the whole of the third special period, and, as a result, the claimants will be in receipt of benefit up to practically the end of the period, subject to one week's gap without benefit being served after receipt of each five weeks' benefit.

CREDIT OF CONTRIBUTIONS.

While the provisions of the Act provide for all claimants receiving the same number of weeks' benefit in the third special period, it will be seen that the claimant with contributions was given the advantage of drawing the full 22 weeks' benefit in practically a continuous period, with, however, the result of a larger gap at the end of the period. Claimants without a credit of contributions are, on the other hand, receiving their benefit by instalments, and the earliest date on which they can exhaust their 22 weeks' benefit is 25th October next.

The fourth special period for the payment of unemployment benefit will run from 2nd November, 1922, to the 1st July, 1923. As the law at present stands, claimants without contributions will be allowed an aggregate of 12 weeks' benefit. This period of 12 weeks' benefit may be increased in certain circumstances by two additional periods of not more than five weeks each. The grant of any benefit in excess of 12 weeks will, however, only be made to persons who can show a credit of three contributions for each week of benefit claimed.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

UNANIMOUS DISARMAMENTS POLICY.

GENEVA, Wednesday.

The Assembly of the League of Nations, after speeches by M. Lange, Norway; Senor Palacios, Spain; M. Vicuna, Chile; M. Zuhle, Denmark; and further remarks from Lord Robert Cecil, Reporter to the Committee, adopted the full report of the Third Commission on the reduction of armaments.

Lord Robert Cecil, in the course of a short speech, said that the salient feature of the debate had been the remarkable agreement of all the delegations in regard to disarmament. Being convinced that all the peoples of the world desired peace, he recommended the acceptance of the report by the Assembly.

Senor Edwards, President of the League, concluded the debate with an eloquent speech.

Among the resolutions adopted was one proposed by Senor Palacios providing for the cooperation of the Technical Committee of the League in the forthcoming Pan-American Conference at Santiago.—(Reuter.)

NEAR EAST DIFFICULTY.

The President announced that Greece had contributed two million drachmas and Sweden one thousand pounds for the relief of Asia Minor refugees. The Assembly adopted a resolution expressing its desire to see peace in the Near East re-established, and hoping that the Council would contribute its co-operation to that end.

It is estimated that the damage done to the organ at Lichfield Cathedral through a heavy rainfall will cost about £100 to repair. The total cost of repair if the whole of the organ had been damaged would have been about £18,000.

DISMASTED SCHOONER.

RESCUE OFF IRISH COAST.

Bound from Tynemouth to Glasgow with a cargo of china clay, the schooner, Cecil Brindley, of Plymouth, was yesterday morning towed into the port of Dublin, dismasted, and wrecked above decks.

In an interview with the mate of the vessel, it was learned that the Cecil Brindley belonged to Plymouth, and that her owner Captain W. T. Cunndy, was on board for the passage. Mr. James Stevens, the chief mate, said that on last Sunday morning, when 36 miles north-east of the Longships Light, they encountered a gale and heavy seas. Their first mishap was when a breakage of the tackle of the main boom occurred, two of the crew being seriously injured.

George Hodge had an arm broken, and Thomas Orton, the cook of the vessel, had his left arm badly wrenched.

With two of her crew disabled, the Cecil Brindley, damaged in her gear, continued on her trip till she had to heave to on Monday night off "The Bishop's." The southerly gale resumed its violence. Tremendous seas were running and breaking over the schooner, when at 2 a.m. the weather lanyards were carried away. At 4.30 a.m. the fore-mast smashed above the deck, and went overboard, and in its fall slightly injured a lad named William Denham.

The skipper and the chief officer cut away the trailing sticks and cordage, but there was yet to come more trouble, for the main mast also smashed and fell over the stern of the vessel, breaking the rail and causing other damage.

In her dismasted and helpless condition the schooner was sighted by the steam collier, Cameo, which came as close as possible to her, and suggested that those aboard the Cecil Brindley should leave in their own boat and board the collier. Owing to the injured men, however, such a course was impracticable.

A little later the Clyde Shipping Company's steamer, Saltees, bound from Glasgow to Southampton, hove in sight, and bore down to the assistance of the schooner. By clever manipulation of his vessel the captain of the Saltees got close enough to the Cecil Brindley to pass a line, and then transfer a towing hawser to the schooner, after which he brought her safely into the Alexandra Basin, Dublin.

A Corporation ambulance took the injured members of the crew to Jervis Street Hospital.

Yesterday the vessel had her pumps at work, cleaning out water which had entered "overboard" and by leakage through the straining of her timbers.

The mate of the Cecil Brindley said that he believed that if the ss. Saltees had not come to the rescue the schooner must have been driven ashore on the Irish coast line.

DONEGAL RATE COLLECTION.

COUNCILLOR THREATENS TO RESIGN.

There was an interesting sequel on Monday to the action recently taken by the Buncrana Urban Council when six members of that body threatened to resign as a protest against the want of assistance in the collection of rates received from the Local Government Department of the Provisional Government. The Inspector of the Department visited Buncrana last week, and found that the Council had retained in its service as rate-collector a man who had taken a prominent part in irregular activities around Buncrana, and was one of the garrison in Ard Caen House when they surrendered and were taken prisoners by the national troops.

In consequence of this visit of the inspector a special meeting of the Council was held on Monday night to consider a communication from the inspector demanding the dismissal of the rate-collector. Mr. Patrick Porter presided.

After some discussion,

Mr. John O'Donnell proposed, and Mr. John Porter seconded, a resolution to the effect that the Council should comply with the request that the rate-collector be dismissed.

Mr. M'Glinchey objected to the dismissal of the man, and said that he should get a chance to resign.

The Chairman invited Mr. M'Glinchey to propose an amendment. He declined to do so, but instead wrote out his resignation, which he handed to the Chairman, and then left the meeting.

The resolution was carried unanimously.

A representative of the military authority in the area attended the meeting at the request of the Department, and produced a written authorisation to take over the rate-books irrespective of what action the Council might take in the matter.

LOCAL EXAMINATION SUCCESS.—In the list of successful candidates at the recent Final Examination of the Chartered Institute of Secretaries appears the name of Mr. J. Linahan, of Woodford Green, who was prepared for the Examination through the Postal Coaching Courses of the Metropolitan College (Dept. E.S.), St. Albans, by whom comprehensive Examination Guide is issued gratis on request.—(Advt.)

WATERWAYS & TRANSPORT.

IN NORTH DUBLIN RURAL DISTRICT.

At yesterday's meeting of the North Dublin Rural District Council—Mr. Patrick Connolly presiding—arising out of a letter from the Town Clerk of Dublin, stating that the Corporation have no funds to repair their cottages at Baldoyle, the Chairman suggested that the Council should reconsider its previous decision not to take over these cottages from the Corporation. The cottages, it was pointed out, were let at low rents, from 2s. to 3s. weekly, and the Corporation had decided to let the property take care of itself.

Mr. Baggot said that, as they had power under the Labourers Act to acquire existing cottages, it would probably be to the advantage of the Council and the benefit of the people to acquire this property.

It was decided to bring the matter up at next meeting.

With regard to the proposed drainage of Mulhuddart graveyard, the Council decided to ask the Local Government Department to sanction a loan for the purpose. The Ministry had promised to consider the matter on receipt of certain particulars, which the Clerk was directed to supply.

On the subject of waterways in North Dublin rural district area, Mr. William Morris, Engineer to the Council, supplied a report compiled in accordance with a circular issued by the Canal Commission under Dail Eireann. The report was divided into two parts, the first being a general statement as to mileage, etc., of canals and principal rivers in the district, and the second comprising answers to questions in the circular.

In the first part of the report it is pointed out that means of transport in the district, apart from the railways, which serve only a small portion of same, is poor. In recent years, however, a number of firms in the district or vicinity have adopted motor transport.

In reply to the question—"Is the greatest use made by producers of the facilities existing at present on the waterways, or is rail and road transport found to afford such facilities, having regard to the character of modern business transactions, as to justify their greater cost?," the Engineer says:—

"No. Rail and road preferred, largely, however, due to want of facilities on canal and lack of encouragement."

In answer to another question, the Engineer states:—

"For perishable goods and fast deliveries motor road transport is not a competitor of the canal, as the latter is useless for such purposes. Horse transport with farm carts, and also heavy motor transport, does great damage to roads, and should bear fair proportion of cost and upkeep. Canal, properly developed and worked, might make it unprofitable for many farmers and others to use road transport for certain classes of produce."

The report was duly noted.

ULSTER'S COST OF LIVING.

INTERESTING EVIDENCE AT INQUIRY.

The Departmental Committee on the Cost of Living in Northern Ireland resumed its sittings in Belfast yesterday, when evidence was given by Messrs. H. Attwood, John Beatty, and Harry C. Spiers on behalf of the Engineering and Shipbuilding Federation.

The evidence was to the effect that the cost of living to the working classes in Belfast during the months from August to October, 1921, when the Federation carried out a series of investigations, was 20 per cent. higher than the figures issued by the Imperial authorities. A number of actual family budgets were quoted, comparing prices in 1914 with the present. The figures in these cases were £1 5s. 8d. and £2 11s. 2½d.; £1 6s. 2½d. and £2 13s. 10d.; £1 5s. 7½d. and £2 13s. 7d.; and 8s. 7½d. and 16s. 10½d.

Mr. Robertson said that the quality of tea in 1914 was better than now at a given price. It was three times better.

Miss Galway expressed a similar opinion. The 1914 tea was much better at a cheaper rate than now.

Mr. Spiers said that some of the items showed an increase of 100 per cent.

In reply to the Chairman, witness said that he was secretary of the Anti-Profiteering Committee, whose object was to get prices reduced. They brought about interviews, and as a result they got bread reduced and a promise of the reduction of the price of milk. Speaking generally, he said that he believed they did some good, with the help of the Press. He believed that the price of bread would not have been reduced only for their efforts.

In reply to Mr. Dale, he said that he could not possibly go into who was to blame for the high prices—producers, manufacturers, or middlemen. A short time ago potatoes were sold in Belfast market at 2s. 3d. a hundredweight, and retailed at 8d. or 10d. a stone. He thought that was too much. One shilling on the top of the 2s. 3d. was enough.

FARMERS NOT TO BLAME.

To Major M'Cormack—They found that in some articles the farmer was getting pre-war prices, but those articles were not retailed at such prices. He would say that the farmer was not to blame for the present high prices, although it was between the farmer and the middleman.

To Mr. Freeland—It was difficult to get any figures as to the price of fish. He saw in the Press that they had been thrown back into the sea when certain prices could not be obtained.

Continuing, the witness said that the price of coal pre-war was about 25s. 6d. a ton; now it was £2 12s. 6d. to £2 15s. They did not get an interview with the coal merchants, and he was unable to give figures as to the price of coal in Belfast and at the pithead.

Mr. Freeland said that if they looked up the papers they would see that nearly all the coal sold in Belfast came from Scotland.

Mr. Thomas—And it is sold as English coal. (Laughter.)

Mr. Spiers, continuing his evidence, said that as regards clothing he was unable at the moment to state what tailors' wages were at present. A pre-war shirt at 4s. 6d. would now cost about 12s. 6d. Hats costing 3s. 9d. in pre-war times were now 10s. 6d.

As regards railway rates, the witness said that they were 100 per cent. up, and mineral transport fares were proportionately higher. They had not approached the railway companies for some time. The companies always said—"We will consider the matter, and let you know." (Laughter.)

Replying to Mr. Thomas—Witness said that the Anti-Profiteering Committee had not gone into the relative prices of whiskey in England and Ireland. There were more "drys" than "wets" on the Committee. However, he believed that the prices here were giving great dissatisfaction to workers. There seemed to be considerable "profiteering."

THE FRUIT MARKET.

To Major McCormack—In one case tomatoes were bought at 9d. a lb., and retailed at 1s. 6d. a lb.

Major McCormack asked the witness had he any knowledge of fruit being destroyed rather than put on the market at a reasonable price.

Witness—No.

Major McCormack said that he had no doubt about it. He had it on reliable authority. He considered fruit a most important article of diet, and he was inclined to believe that 50 per cent. of the fruit grown near Belfast never reached the human being at all. They all saw the prices in the papers for fruit. He could not understand why rather than put fruit on the market at a reasonable price it was destroyed.

A member said fruit was sold for about 1s. or 1s. 6d. a stone in England, and it was sold in Belfast at 8d. or 10d. per lb.

Mr. Spiers, in further evidence, said that he thought the high tramway fares were due, not to the system, but to the management.

Mr. Attwood said that they would not be in favour of the reduction of fares if it meant bringing down the workers' wages.

Mr. Spiers, in reply to the Chairman, said that an index number would be a deterrent to "profiteering," and it would enable purchasers to beat down high figures. He would be in favour of an anti-profiteering committee, and he would give it unlimited powers to put an end to "profiteering." He hoped the committee would make such recommendations as would put an end to the present state of things.

The Committee then adjourned until Tuesday.

CIVIC GUARDSMAN'S FUNERAL.

A public funeral was given to Charles Eastwood, aged 19 years, a member of the Civic Guard, who met his death under circumstances already reported. There was Requiem Mass at St. James's Roman Catholic Church, Dublin, and the funeral procession to Glasnevin Cemetery was headed by the pipers' band of the Civic Guard. A detachment of the Civic Guard, under the command of Superintendent Clinton, and of the Dublin Metropolitan Police, with their band, under the command of Superintendent Carey and Inspectors Herbert and O'Keeffe, also took part. The chief mourners were:—Mr. M. Eastwood (brother), Mr. John Eastwood (uncle), Mrs. Eastwood, Mrs. Nugent, and Mr. Michael Eastwood.

Mme. Zaghlul sails from Port Said on Monday next to join her husband at Gibraltar.

The two-year-old daughter of a Plymouth dairyman has died as the result of falling into a pan of hot milk in her father's dairy. Her Christian names were Lenin de Valera.

SERVICE OF LICENSING NOTICES.

LETTER TO CHIEF STATE SOLICITOR.

Messrs. M. J. O'Connor and Co., solicitors, Wexford, have written as follows to the Chief State Solicitor with reference to the service of licensing notices:—

9th September, 1922.

M. A. Corrigan, Esq., Chief State Solicitor, Dublin Castle.

DEAR SIR,—Referring to the advertisement about the service of the licensing notices, you will greatly oblige us if you will kindly let us know:—

(1) What is the notice of application for? Is it for the annual Licensing Petty Sessions or for the Quarter Sessions?

(2) If we may serve the notices by registered letter on the Commissioner of the Civic Guard, Lower Castle street, Dublin; or will it be necessary to serve the Commissioner personally with notice of application for transfer or for confirmation of licence?

(3) Will it be allowable to have the annual Licence Petty Sessions for the renewal of licences; because otherwise, of course, all the licences in Southern Ireland will be at an end and would not be renewed, the licence only being given from the 30th September in one year to the 30th September in the next year; it is renewed at the annual Licensing Petty Sessions.

(4) Has it been determined that there will be Quarter Sessions held in October to enable licences to be transferred or renewed, or for the granting of new hotel licences where adjudged necessary?

(5) If it is intended that the local magistrates in each Petty Sessions district in Southern Ireland are to hold an annual Licensing Petty Sessions as heretofore for the renewal (amongst others) of Excise licences requiring 21 days' notice to police, a new arrangement will have to be made as to the date of holding same, because, obviously, it would not be possible to hold that sessions on the last Petty Sessions Court day in September (being the date fixed for holding the sessions by Order in Council of 2/2/1875) and have the time to give 21 days' previous notice to the Commissioner of the Civic Guard.

We understand that in some Petty Sessions districts where Petty Sessions Courts are held monthly the annual Licensing Petty Sessions has been actually held and publicans' renewal certificates signed.

In Co. Wexford and Co. Wicklow, in cases where the 21 days' notices are required for renewal of Excise licences at Petty Sessions, such notices have been served on the Brigade Police Officer at the military barracks, Wexford and Wicklow, 21 days before the 27th September inst., which is the date of the annual Licensing Petty Sessions for these districts.

Please say if these notices are sufficient.

As this matter is very important for the licensing trade of the twenty-six counties of Southern Ireland, we are going to publish this letter and your reply, with your kind permission, when we receive it.—Yours truly,

M. J. O'CONNOR AND CO.

THE ROAD TO KILLARNEY.

ATTACKS ON FOOD CONVOY.

A food convoy, consisting of over sixty vehicles laden with various necessaries of life, while travelling to Killarney from Tralee on the 20th inst., was attacked at several places.

The most serious of these attacks was made near the village of Currans, where the national troops were fired at from three points. The attackers were, however, driven off. Portion of the roof of one house from which the irregulars fired was destroyed.

At Ballybrack they were again attacked, but the attackers were driven off.

The casualties are:—Sergeant MacSweeney, Transport, 78 Lower Leeson street, Dublin, slightly wounded; and Volunteer Dunphy, Dublin Guards, seriously wounded.

The casualties to the irregulars are believed to have been heavy.

A DEATH TRAP.

BOMBS BELOW FELLED TREES.

When national troops were clearing obstructions from the Old Chapel road, Bandon, they found the pin of a bomb near a felled three. A close examination showed that bombs from which the safety pins had been extracted had been placed below the tree, and that they would explode when the tree was moved. The officer sent for the irregular prisoners in the local barracks, and, having explained the position and warned them to be careful, ordered them to remove the tree. While they were doing so two bombs exploded, but no damage was done.

ATTACKS ON RAILWAYS.

MUCH WANTON DAMAGE.

The attacks on the Great Southern and Western Railway Company's system continues. At Belmont the store was raided and goods pilfered, and on the section between Belmont and Banagher an overhead bridge was damaged, and a mile post was found laid across the track. In the section between Ballycumber and Athlone wires were cut. At Cashel Station the premises were raided and some foodstuffs stolen.

At Goold's Cross the signal cabin was burned and a number of chairs broken, causing temporary interruption in the train service. At Bridgetown the signal cabin was burned, the booking office entered, and documents taken out and destroyed.

At Charleville Junction the signal cabin was burnt down, and at Grange, near Waterford, the signal cabin, block instruments, station appliances, gates, trucks, etc., were burnt.

Yesterday morning the line was broken again between Gowran and Bagenalstown. This prevents the running of a through goods service, but the company is maintaining a passenger service to and from the point of obstruction, and hopes to deal with Gowran race traffic today.

DUBLIN UNION.

At the meeting of the Guardians of the Dublin Union yesterday, Mr. M. O'Foley presiding,

The Clerk (Dr. Condon) reported that the number in the house on Saturday last was 3,366, as compared with 3,652 on the corresponding day last year.

M. J. Crone was elected temporary male lunatic attendant. There were four other candidates.

Captain W. A. Woods, of London, late of the Royal Irish Constabulary, has been appointed Chief Constable of Hull at a salary beginning at £900.

SCOTLAND AND IRISH STORES.

DEPUTATION TO SIR A. GRIFFITH-BOSCAWEN.

The recent modified order of the Board of Agriculture (England) concerning the importation and sale of Irish store cattle in Scotland was discussed last night at the Ministry of Agriculture, when an influential deputation representing Scottish farmers and auctioneers waited upon the President of the Board to ask that the whole of the Scottish markets should be open to the reception of such cattle instead of the 8 specified by the Order.

The Order was originally introduced in connection with the serious outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease, and under it only the markets at Forfar, Perth, Sterling, Edinburgh, Laurencekirk and Kincardine were specified as places where Irish stores could be kept and sold under the 6 days' detention regulation imposed by the Ministry's order.

There are now two other markets authorised for reception—St. Boswell's, Roxburgh, and the Belmont auction market at Aberdeen, but up to the present they have not been used. The restriction has resulted in a much decreased importation of store cattle into Scotland from Ireland, Irish breeders not being willing to ship their stock to meet a chance sale, and Scottish farmers being unwilling to incur the expense of travelling long distances in order to make their purchases and to train them back to their home destinations.

The deputation put forward the request to Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen yesterday that the whole of the markets in Scotland should be freed, so far as Irish store cattle was concerned, while at the same time no demand was made for the lifting of the 6 days' detention governing the removal of cattle from one market to another. It was pointed out to the Minister that considerable hardship was now inflicted upon Scottish farmers in remote districts, who wished to obtain the stores, and that, in view of the fact that the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease had been eradicated, there was no reason why one district should be placed in a favoured position as against another. Scotland, it was pointed out, wanted 120,000 store cattle within the next few months, but unless the whole of the markets were open, there would be considerable difficulty in obtaining them.

Sir A. Griffith-Boscawen, after hearing the arguments of the principal speaker, Mr. Alexander Batchelor, Vice-President of the National Farmers' Union of Scotland, stated that he would give the matter every consideration, and would make known his decision at the earliest possible moment.

The deputation consisted of Mr. James Lennox, President of the National Farmers' Union of Scotland; Mr. Alexander Batchelor, Vice-President; Mr. J. C. Henderson, Cupar, Fife; Mr. William Law, Edinburgh; Mr. George D. Scott, Forfar; Mr. Harry Fraser, Perth; Mr. George Watson, Edinburgh; Mr. J. G. Milne, Montrose; Mr. James Howie, Laurencekirk; and Mr. William Mitchell, Brechin.

The proceedings were private.

HUNGER STRIKE BROKEN.

PRISONERS IN CORK JAIL.

The hunger strike which was declared on Sunday by the 435 irregulars who are interned in Cork Jail ended on Tuesday. Thirteen prisoners took food on Monday morning, and by Tuesday morning the number had increased to 71. The other prisoners then decided to break their self-imposed fast.

It is estimated that damage to the extent of £3,000 was done by the prisoners to the jail on Sunday. Descriptions of the disturbances were given at a military inquiry on Monday evening—Coroner's inquests cannot be held in Cork without the written authority of the competent military authority—into the circumstances connected with the death of Patrick Mangan, a prisoner, who was shot by the troops.

Commandant Scott said that on the 23rd inst. the prisoners' commandant handed him a list of demands, and said that if they were not granted, a hunger strike would begin at 7 o'clock on the following morning. The demands were:—(1) The cell doors and yard doors open from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.; (2) free communication between men in all wings; (3) Parcels, letters, in and out, to be allowed; (4) supply of mattresses, blankets, enamel mugs, plates, knives and forks.

Regarding 1, 2, and 3, he told the prisoners' representative that, owing to the abuse of privileges, all privileges except that of exercise had been withdrawn. As regards No. 4, the prisoners were better equipped than his own men.

The prisoners were boisterous all night, and in the morning all of them, except six, refused to take breakfast. They were allowed into the exercise yards at 8 o'clock, and at 11 o'clock were ordered to return to their cells. Witness then detailed the steps that were taken to get the prisoners to obey the order, and said that finally the guard was ordered to fire and Mangan was wounded.

Rev. Father D. V. Wilson said that before the trouble occurred he was asked by the prisoners to hear confessions. The "commandant" of the prisoners said that the confessions should be "unconditional"—that any men who were to make confessions would go on the understanding that they were fully prepared to carry on when the opportunity presented itself.

Witness explained to him that such an attitude was impossible, as confession implied, on the penitent's part, the telling of sins for which he was sorry, and would be resolved to avoid in the future. He retorted and said, "We have priests on both sides of the fence," adding that witness's was just a personal opinion. He said under those circumstances confession on the part of the men was impossible, and implied that that ended the matter in his eyes. Witness tried to reason further with him, and told him that no priest under those circumstances would hear any confessions, republican or otherwise. He said they were now undergoing hunger strike, and the only course open to them was to carry on. Witness told him if any of the prisoners wished to have confession heard on the understanding that they would take no further active opposition to the recognised Government that he (witness) would make the necessary arrangements with the commandant immediately. The commandant, when witness went to him in reference to the matter, asked witness to wait until they were back in their cells, when it would be easier to interview them.

The witness added that in his opinion the officer of the guard "did all that a sane man could do to get the prisoners peacefully out of the yard."

The court found that Mangan met his death as the result of a shot fired by a sentry in the execution of his duty, and that the officer who gave the order to fire was justified, as the prisoners had sufficient warnings and ample time to comply with the order to return to their cells.

FUNERAL OF RIGHT REV. MONSIGNOR O'DONNELL, D.D.

The funeral of the Right Rev. Monsignor O'Donnell, D.D., late Parish Priest of Booterstown, took place yesterday. The Parish Church at Booterstown, where a Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated, was crowded, and the funeral procession to Glasnevin Cemetery was very largely attended. The celebrant of the Mass was the Right Rev. Monsignor Dunne, P.P.; the deacon and sub-deacon respectively being the Rev. J. McCarthy and the Rev. J. Matthews. The Right Rev. U.S. MARKETS.

STOCKS CLOSED WEAK.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

NEW YORK, Wednesday.

Stocks opened irregular. A rise in Standard Oil issues was utilised to sell elsewhere, and later all weakened under Bear hammering. Following the passing of the Pittsburg Coal dividend, Pittsburg Coal fell 8½ points, and many others 1 to 3. Steels, Equipments, Railroads, and Tobaccos were supplied freely. The heaviness of Liberty Bonds on uncertainty regarding the conditions of the next Government financing programme was also a depressing factor, and the market closed weak.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Wednesday.

WHEAT—Spot market steady, ½c. to 1½c. up. Exporters engaged 40 boatloads of wheat, 55 of corn, and 50,000 barrels of flour. Receipts—Atlantic 1,328,000, last year 1,159,000; clearances 527,000, last year 886,000.

FLOUR steady.

CORN on spot steady at ½c. advance. Receipts—Atlantic 52,000, last year 21,500; clearances 69,000, last year 41,000.

COFFEE opened easy, 1 to 4 points lower, and was depressed in the early dealings owing to disappointing advices from Brazil and selling by trade interests; but rallied later on importers buying and shorts covering, the market closing firm, 4 to 9 points up. Spot steady and unchanged. Approximate sales—15,000. October, 9.20; December, 9.35; March, 9.37; May, 9.37; July, 9.31.

RUBBER steady, ½c. up; smoked ribbed sheets, 15½; first latex crepe, 15½.

SUGAR steady; Porto Rico nominal. Futures easy, 10 to 7 points down. October, 3.04; December, 3.16; March, 3.04; May, 3.15.

COTTON opened steady, but unchanged, to 2 points lower. Values declined under Southern selling, the weakness of exchange rates, and liquidation; but soon recovered on bullish private crop advices and Wall street support. The declining movement was resumed subsequently on expectations of a bearish ginners' report. Stop-loss orders were put out, and bear pressure was in evidence, the market closing heavy, 30 to 39 points down. Spot quiet at 30 points fall. New Orleans spot 25 points lower. CHICAGO, Wednesday.

WHEAT opened easy, ⅛c. to ½c. down, and further receded on large receipts and bearish Liverpool cables; then improved under small foreign stocks and a demand from milling interests and commission houses and shorts covering September contracts; but again partially eased under increasing stocks and interior receipts and liquidation. The market closed irregular, 3½c. up to ⅜c. lower. Spot steady. No. 2 hard winter, spot, 108⅜; No. 3 hard winter, spot, 107½. September, 109½; December, 105½; May, 108⅜.

CORN opened steady, ⅛c. down to ⅛c. up, and advanced all round on small country offerings, a better cash demand, rumours of export business, shorts covering, and commission house buying for South-West account. A decline followed on increased interior movement, selling by cash houses, and realising. The market closed barely steady, 1⅛c. to ⅜c. dearer. No. 2 mixed, spot, 65. September, 64½; December, 59⅜; May, 62.

OATS steady at ⅛c. to ⅜c. rise. September, 41½; December, 37½; May, 38½.

PROVISIONS opened steady. Lard advanced on a firm hog market, light offerings and receipts, shorts covering, buying by packers, a good cash demand, and in sympathy with wheat; but there was no trading in pork or ribs. The market closed steady, with lard 5 points up to 5 down and ribs 40 to 25 points higher. Lard—September, 11.42½; October, 11.20; January, 9.27½. Pork unquoted. Ribs—September, 10.90; October, 10.50.

WOMAN'S £1,000 CHEQUE.

CHARGE OF FALSE PRETENCES.

A woman named Mrs. O'Rafferty, of Carrickmore, who on going to Chester told her landlord that she was going to take some big houses and let them off in flats, was charged at the local police court yesterday with obtaining food and lodgings to the value of £6 by false pretences.

The Chief Constable said that to support her statement she produced a cheque for £1,000, and subsequently she entered into negotiations with solicitors for the purchase of two large houses in Chester and its neighbourhood. In one case she obtained a deposit of £100 from a person anxious to become a tenant of one of the houses. In addition, said the Chief Constable, during her short stay in Chester she had been negotiating for the purchase of motor cars, and in several instances had run up accounts with Chester tradesmen for large amounts.

Mr. Walsh, with whom the accused woman had lodged, said that he gave up good work in order to act as caretaker of a large house which she alleged that she was going to buy.

The woman was remanded for a week, bail being refused.

Thousands of ladies keep a box of Martin's Pills in the House. Those who use them recommend them, hence their enormous sale. Price 5s., post free. Sold by all Chemists and Stores. Prior and Co., Chemists, Londonderry, sell them, or from Proprietors, Martin, Chemists, Southampton.—(Advt.)

GASFILLED ELECTRIC LAMP PATENT.

Beware of Infringements.

Since the important decision in the House of Lords on December 15th, 1921, when the validity of the Master Patent covering the manufacture of gasfilled lamps was finally established, numerous actions have been taken by the Patentees to restrain infringement of their patent, and this necessary measure of protection will be vigorously proceeded with.

INJUNCTIONS OR JUDGMENTS

have already been obtained against the following firms, in respect of the sale or manufacture of infringing lamps:—

Corona Lamp Works, Limited ... 10, Ascham Street, Kentish Town, N.W.
The B.T.T. Electric Lamp and Accessories Co. (Interim Injunction) 10, Rangoon Street, Crutched Friars, E.C.
Semco, Limited ... 19/20, High Street, Shoreditch.
Child's Electrical Stores ... 72, Lancaster Road, North Kensington.
A. J. Lofthouse ... 379, Blackburn Road, Accrington.
H. Bake & Co. ... 14, St. John Street, Manchester.
H. W. Daniel (Interim Injunction) ... 75, Fetter Lane, London, E.C.4.
Wolf Bros. ... Warwick Court, High Holborn, W.C.
Lavender & Isaacs ... 46, Islington High Street, London, N 1.
Naamlooze Vennootschap Pope's Metaaldraadlampenfabriek and ... Keltenstraat 14, Venlo, Holland.
Charlesworth Peebles & Co. ... 134, St. Vincent Street, Glasgow.
King & Co. ... Leith Electric Works, Prince Regent Street, Leith, Edinburgh.
Jones & Stewart ... 59, Robertston Street, Glasgow.
A. Thomann ... 31, Langham Street, Gt. Portland Street, W.1.
N.L.O. Company (Interim Infunction) 5, Carisbrooke Road, Walton, Liverpool.

Many other Actions have been commenced, some of which have already been settled by the defendants giving an undertaking not to further infringe and paying damages and costs.

Important.

Only gasfilled lamps made by the following firms or their licensees are free from infringement:—

THE BRITISH THOMSON-HOUSTON Co., Ltd. — Manufacturers of MAZDA LAMPS
THE GENERAL ELECTRIC Co., Ltd. — Manufacturers of OSRAM LAMPS
SIEMENS BROS. & Co., Ltd. — Manufacturers of SIEMENS LAMPS

All genuine "Gasfilled" lamps are marked on the bulb with the word GASFILLED.

WARNING.—Legal proceedings will be taken by the Patentees against any person manufacturing, selling, or using infringing lamps.

MR JUSTICE GORDON.

NORTHERN HIGH COURT TRIBUTES.

References were made in the Northern High Court yesterday to the death of Mr. Justice Gordon.

Mr. Justice Wilson, who was sitting as Vacation Judge, said that he thought it was only fitting that on behalf of the Bench of Northern Ireland and the Bar and solicitors' profession they should express their tribute of regret at the sad and sudden death of Mr. Justice Gordon. By his unfailing courtesy, industry, and ability he had gained the affection and respect of all members of the profession. To his host of friends his death would come as a very great grief. Indeed, to a number of his colleagues on the North-East Bar it seemed almost unbearable to think that they would see him no more. He felt sure that it was the unanimous wish of all the members of the legal profession that that tribute of respect to his memory and sympathy for his widow and children should be made in that courthouse, where the late judge had so frequently distinguished himself and made a name second to none.

Mr. George Hill Smith, K.C., said that as "Father" of the Northern Circuit he would like to associate himself with Mr. Justice Wilson's feeling reference to the late judge, who had joined the circuit in March, 1878. Mr. Smith recalled that of the six members who had joined the circuit at that time, he, unfortunately, was the only survivor. The late judge had, he said, enjoyed the friendship of every member of the circuit. He was loyal to his duty, loyal to his colleagues, and loyal to the Bench. Every succeeding hour which he remained on the circuit he won to a greater extent the affection and regard of them all.

The sentiments of his lordship were endorsed by all members of the Bar, who joined in the expression of sympathy.

BANN POWER SCHEME.

A SYNDICATE FORMED.

The scheme for developing power from the River Bann has made substantial progress. Dr. J. F. Crowley, of 16 Victoria street, Westminster, London, the well-known authority on water power and electricity, was recently in Belfast in conference on the matter. Dr. Crowley was a member of the Board of Trade Committee on electricity supply, and also a member of the Board of Trade Committee on water power resources.

Since the Board of Trade Committee reported in favour of the generation of electricity from the River Bann, a project for giving effect to the Committee's proposals has been receiving attention in London, the moving spirit there being the Right Hon. J. C. White, Belfast, who was himself a member of the Water Resources Committee and its representative on the Water Power Legislation Committee in London.

A company, entitled the Bann Syndicate, Ltd., was incorporated in London on the 22nd inst. by the legal firm of Messrs. Ashurst, Morris, Crisp and Co. for the purpose of providing for the promotion of a private bill in the Northern Parliament during the ensuing session, and the necessary outside support has now been guaranteed, while the scheme will have the strong local co-operation of a group of manufacturers and others, represented by Mr. T. M. Greer, of Ballymoney, who has devoted considerable time and energy to its advocacy.

It is proposed, with a view to securing the necessary powers, to promote a bill in the Northern Parliament in the coming session, and the requisite surveys and plans are already well in hand.

A scheme of this character for the generation and distribution of cheap electricity current over a widespread area is certain to produce definite industrial development in the areas it affects, which comprise a considerable part of Antrim and Londonderry, and may even include inter-linking with the existing Belfast supply. Indeed, industry in the entire six-county area should receive a powerful stimulus from such a project.

NO TRUCE WITH CRIME.

CASTLEBAR COUNCIL AND PEACE.

At an adjourned meeting of the Castlebar Urban Council on Monday night, the Waterford "peace" resolution, which was postponed from the previous meeting, was considered.

The Chairman (Dr. A. MacBride) said that it was not worth considering.

Mr. S. J. McCormack said that it was time that they had peace.

Mr. J. J. Collins pointed out that the resolution asked them to "down tools" until Dail Eireann met. Now it had met, and there was hardly any necessity to enter upon a discussion.

Mr. McCormack—It will do no harm to pass it.

The Chairman—There cannot be any peace but one, and that is on condition that ruffianism be crushed out as any other crime would be dealt with.

Mr. McCormack—When there could be a truce with a foreign country, I do not see why there could not be one amongst ourselves.

The Chairman—I have been a long time now working in Irish affairs—certainly for 33 years—and the outlook that we had—those that I was associated with—was a prosperous and free Ireland. I never met or knew anyone that thought a prosperous and free Ireland was an Ireland in which her bridges were blown up; her railways interfered with, her post offices closed, her public buildings burned to the ground, and her economic life destroyed, and assassination attempted. I say here, that I look upon those who condone as being just as guilty as those who actually perpetrate in those acts. Who is going to make a truce with crime? I say it is an outrage on justice and on all decent thought to suggest it.

Mr. T. J. Loftus said that, outrage though it might be, he thought that for the sake of the people in the country and for the benefit of Ireland it would better if they had a compromise on both sides. If there was no compromise, and if things went on through the winter as they were going on now, it would be black indeed. They were not a very big body there, but if they could make their voice heard, and if a compromise could be made, even though there were things done that they would not wish had been done, it would be well. People should speak out their minds. Peace would never be brought about by force.

Mr. McCormick said the Americans fought amongst themselves for eight years and there had to be a compromise before there was peace.

The resolution was marked "read."

LATE GENERAL MICHAEL COLLINS.

The following message of condolence has been received at Government Buildings, Upper Merrion street:—

"Registry Office of Turf Club,
"14 Upper Merrion street,
"Dublin.

"We, the Stewards and Members of the Irish Turf Club, desire to express our deep regret at the death of General Michael Collins, and tender to his relatives and to President Cosgrave our most sincere sympathy."

"Proposed by Sir William Goulding, seconded by the Right Hon. T. K. Laidlaw."

ROBBERY AT SEAPOINT.

Yesterday morning the foreman and porter at Seapoint Station, on the Dublin and South-Eastern Railway, were "held up" by two armed men, who stole 19s. from the booking office.

NOT A FETISH.

The Welsh language is a fact, and not a fetish, said the Archbishop of Wales yesterday, at a meeting of the Church in Wales, at Llandrindod Wells, in supporting the suggestion that people should have the language they required. He desired a highway between England and Wales kept open, without toll or preference, for those who travelled either way.

SPORTING PARAGRAPHS.

Great interest is being taken in the race between Elliott and Donoghue for the jockeys' premiership. Donoghue is now six ahead.

Silver Image was struck out of all engagements at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning. They include the Duke of York Handicap and the Cambridgeshire.

The German St. Leger (220,000 marks) was won at Grunewald by the Hoenwalt stable's Abgott. Bred at the Graditz Stud, Abgott is a son of Biniou and Abwechslung, by Hannibal—Alveole, by Crafton—Sainte Alvere, by Hermit, and thus has in his veins some of the best blood of England, France, and Germany.

DOWN ROYAL.

INTERESTING SPORT.

NAVAN LASS WINS KING'S PLATE.

The enterprise of the Down Royal Executive in arranging an additional meeting was well rewarded, for there was a splendid attendance at the Maze course yesterday, and under genial conditions the racing proved of a very interesting order. The special train from Dublin, which left metropolitan racing folk back at their homes at a convenient hour, was largely availed of, and the special trains from Belfast were also well patronised. The King's Plate afforded Navan Lass a further opportunity of proving what a useful stayer she is, and with all her weight she won in the easiest style. Carthage and Marion West were the only ones to oppose Mr. O'Neill's good mare, and, though the former made a bold showing for nearly two miles, Navan Lass outstayed him and won with a lot in hand. Trim Gate, the favourite for the Belfast Plate, ran in disappointing style, and for the last two furlongs Flower Vale and Tragical Maid had the issue between them. Momentarily at the turn into the straight Tragical Maid held out hopes to her supporters, but Flower Vale, running on gamely under his big impost, ultimately won with a good bit to spare. Dundonald, who was in front in the early stages, swerved badly in the straight, and could do no better than finish third. Lady Elaine, also a favourite, was never prominent in the race for the Maze Plate, which was won by Pottinger, and the latter, when afterwards submitted to auction, was bought in for 80 sovs. Soothing Glass, owned by the Northern sportsman, Mr. J. W. Murland, beat a big field for the Dunmurry Plate, and in this instance also backers had a reverse, five horses being supported in preference to the winner. No mistake was made, however, when Martenora was promoted favourite for the Moira Plate. Showing pace away from the barrier, the daughter of Marten was in front all the way and never left the issue in doubt. Red Iron, trained now at Maddenstown Lodge, won the Iveagh Plate from nine others. Details:—

1.30—BELFAST PLATE of 75 sovs. A handicap flat race. 7 f.
Mr. D. Foley's ch. g. FLOWER VALE, by Valens—Flowerer, 5, 9-5 ....C. Aylin 1

Betting—4 to 1 each agst. Crocus, Rapscallion, and Garrymore, 5 to 1 Treble Scotch, 6 to 1 Revol Mine, 10 to 1 SOOTHING GLASS and any other.

Revol Mine showed in front of Garrymore, Crocus, Ballinode, Soothing Glass, Treble Scotch, and Ballylundan, until six furlongs from home, when Garrymore went to the front, followed by Ballinode, Treble Scotch, Crocus, and Soothing Glass. At the distance Soothing Glass took the lead and won easily by eight lengths; three lengths separated second and third. Garrymore was fourth, Navan Boy fifth, Ballinode sixth, Rapscallion seventh, and Ballylundan next.

3.0—THE MOIRA PLATE of 75 sovs. For maiden two years old. 5 f.
Mr. T. N. Perry's ch. h. MARTENORA, by Marten—Kenora, 8-7 .... A. Barrett 1

TO-DAY'S SELECTIONS.

Several important races have to be disposed of to-day, the principal event being the Jockey Club Stakes, for which only a small field is expected. The Winter King is stated to be very well just now, but he had to be eased in his work not so long ago, and I shall turn elsewhere in my search for the winner. Silurian will represent Stanley House, and his Derby display, coupled with the running since then of Soubriquet and the fine gallop which Ceylonese put up yesterday morning on the training ground with Flamboyant, justifies one in anticipating that Lord Derby's three-year-old will require an immensity of beating to-day. At the same time one cannot get over the performance on the part of Lady Juror in splitting Silurian and Soubriquet at Derby, and I am satisfied that the issue of the race to-day depends only upon the ability of Lady Juror to stay the distance. If she cannot, then Silurian should win. Selections are as follow:—

Thetford Selling Plate—Bruff Bridge.
Bentinck Fund Nursery—Rowardennan.
Clare Welter Handicap—Royal Alarm.
Jockey Club Sweepstakes—Lady Juror.
Wicken Selling Plate—Verne filly.
Triennial Produce Stakes—Paola or Thyene.

GOLF.

AT ST. ANDREWS.

PRINCE OF WALES PLAYS HIMSELF IN.

The Prince of Wales entered into office as captain of the Royal and Ancient Club at St. Andrews yesterday morning, after an ordeal unprecedented even in the annals of the historic ceremony of St Andrews installations. The grey old city of St. Andrews was greyer in the morning rain, which fell dismally, as just before 8.30 His Royal Highness stepped down from the terrace of the Royal and Ancient clubhouse and walked to the first tee. By his side were Lord Dunedin, Mr. R. T. Boothby, the retiring captain, and Andrew Kirkaldy. It was an extraordinary spectacle which presented itself to the Prince. Around him was an army of Press photographers and cinema operators; ahead of him was a black mass of lurking caddies, waiting to pounce on the Royal ball, not merely for recompense—which custom has entitled the successful retriever to—but for the honour of taking the ball back to the Royal owner.

The caddies swarmed in all directions, some hoping for a slice, some for a pull, and the central figure in this extraordinary spectacle was the slim debonnair Prince, attired in conventional plus fours. Thus was the stage set for the initiation of the Royal captain. A few minutes remained until the official starting time, and the Prince spent the interval in chatting with those around him. Pulling his driver from a well-stocked bag, he prepared to make his drive. A few preliminary waggles, a graceful swing, and the memorable shot was made. From a purely golfing point of view it was a failure. He hit the ground behind the ball, sent it into the air a few yards, after which it went scuttling along the ground for about fifty yards.

The Royal ball went away to the left, and there was never a chance for the massed caddies to secure possession. Instead, a workman dashed out and secured it. A St. Andrews cleekmaker, a blacksmith, had gained that for which the caddies hoped to scramble. The blacksmith, with his working overalls on, advanced nervously to the Prince, who, going forward to meet him, shook him warmly by the hand, and presented him with a golden sovereign—fitting largess from Royal hands. Meanwhile innumerable cameras had clicked, as their shutters were dropped on the Prince's drive. The historic cannon boomed forth its message that a new captain had opened another medal day, and the ordeal was over.

The Prince of Wales during the morning played over the new course with Mr. R. T. Boothby, and later they decided to participate in the medal competition on the championship course. The Prince played some excellent shots in his round, and, to everybody's delight, he returned an actual score. He took 119 to complete the course, and the fact that he should have put his card in indicated that he had entered into the competitive play with zest. About 8,000 spectators watched the Prince finish, the scene reminding one of the greatest crowd at the championship meeting. He had played beautiful golf, and his long shots left little to be desired; but the putting completely beat him. The Prince took 60 to go out, and 59 to come home. The best return of the day was 75, by F. Roosevelt Scovel, who won the King William IV. medal.

The medal winners were:—King William IV. medal—F. Roosevelt Scovel; score, 75. The club gold medal—Edward Blackwell, 76. The George Glenie medal, best aggregate over spring and autumn meetings—A. V. Hambro, 160.

RAIDS IN DUBLIN.

BOOTS AND LEGGINGS STOLEN.

At about 12.20 o'clock yesterday afternoon, six men, who were armed with revolvers, stole 36 pairs of men's boots and 20 pairs of leggings from the premises of Messrs. Nesbitt and Mavitty, shoe factors, 6 South William street, Dublin.

William Donohoe, described as a van driver, residing at Hanbury lane, was charged at the Dublin Police Court yesterday with having conspired with others to rob from the premises of Messrs. Winstanley, boot and shoe manufacturers, Back lane, boots to the value of £lb.

From the evidence, it appeared that on the 19th inst employés of the firm were held up by armed men, who forced them at the point of the revolver into the office and kept them there for about ten minutes. Sixteen pairs of boots were seized by the raiders, who immediately decamped. One of the employés stated that owing to the excitement and confusion that prevailed he could not identify the defendant.

The evidence of the police and a witness from Oriel House was to the effect that when the defendant was arrested at his residence he said that on the occasion in question he was patrolling under orders, and the only part he took in the raid was to act as an outpost.

Defendant, who stated that he was "a soldier of the I.R.," was returned for trial at the City Sessions.

PROVING HIMSELF A GOLFER.

THE PRINCE AT ST. ANDREW'S.

As the new Captain of the Royal and Ancient Club, the Prince of Wales, in accordance with 160-year-old custom, had to drive a ball from the first tee of the famous St. Andrew's Links, to prove himself a golfer. Tradition demands that each new captain should do this. Whoever reclaims the ball from the first drive returns it to the captain, and receives a suitable reward. Despite the chilly morning, great crowds assembled at the first tee, and a mighty cheer was raised as the Prince emerged from the Club House. With a crowd surging round him, the Prince did not make a good drive. He caught the ground a trifle too soon, and the ball travelled about 50 yards from the tee. A blacksmith recovered the ball, and was rewarded by the Prince with a golden sovereign.

ANGLING.

NORTHERN RIVERS.

Though considerably disturbed by the rains, salmon fishing in the past week was very good on the Belleek-Ballyshannon reaches of the Erne. The season closes on Saturday next, so that there is not much time for salmon fishers to pull up any time that they lost during the unfavourable weather. Since last notes Mr. Frederick Crawford, a constant patron of the Erne, killed nine salmon and grilse, ranging from 14lb. to 8¼lb. Major Bishop had four fish, the heaviest of which scaled 17lb. Sir Josslyn A. R. Gore-Booth killed several fish, the biggest of which weighed 24lb. Below the Falls of Assaroe—so famous in Irish history—sea trout fishing was pretty good, these fish, which run from 1lb. to 4½lb., cruising with the rise and fall of the tide. The flies which they affect are usually of a gaudy pattern, such as the Alexandra, Wickham's Fancy, Golden Olive, Zulu, Red and Teal, and Butcher.

I have not heard much from the Bundrowes lately, but understand that there is a good head of salmon in that river. It connects Lough Melvin with the Atlantic, and, as usual at this time of the year, there is a good run of fish into the Lough. Trout fishing, however, seems to rule the better sport on the lough at the moment, judging from the account of the heavy baskets made, including up to a score of trout, with occasional heavy gillaroo trout.

CONSIDER FARMING IN SOUTH AFRICA.
Farming in the Union of South Africa offers scope for brains and energy, but capital, a minimum of £2,000, is necessary to open the way.
The beginner with capital has still the pick of much good land at low prices. There are small propositions of selected soil, in some cases irrigated, on ten to twenty acres of which a man may make a living from fruit, vegetables and poultry. Then there are the general farms, 500 acres and upwards of grazing and arable land, for dairying and the growing of various crops. In sheep farming or cattle ranching there are the larger holdings of pasturage for the production of wool and beef. And for men who develop a suitable aptitude and have the necessary capital there are good openings in the breeding of pedigree livestock for stud purposes.
Whatever main branch of farming is adopted, there are several side lines to vary the interest and increase the returns.
Publications describing each branch of farming, and the facilities in South Africa for obtaining training and guidance, may be obtained post free from the High Commissioner for the Union of South Africa, Trafalgar square, London, W.C.2. Write for Farm Book No. "B.C."

WEATHER FORECAST.

General Inference.—The depression centred near Scilly is filling up rapidly, and winds over the whole of the British Isles will be light, and mainly from an easterly point. Improving weather is likely, with fair periods in most districts, but there is still a risk of local rain or showers.

Ireland.—Wind Easterly, light; cloudy; fair periods, local rain or showers; visibility moderate; moderate temperature.

South-West seaboard, mouth of Channel to S.W. Ireland, Irish Sea and St. George's Channel, North-West seaboard, N. Ireland to Hebrides—Light Easterly wind; cloudy, fair periods; local rain or showers; visibility moderate; sea slight.

NEWS SUMMARY.

IRELAND.

There was no new development in the Irish postal strike yesterday. The Postmaster-General announced further improvements in the postal and telegraph services, but the Executive of the Postal Workers' Union denied his statements.—(P. 5.)

Sir James Craig arrived yesterday in Ulster from London, where he had a series of conferences with Mr. Winston Churchill regarding Ulster affairs. Speaking at Ballymena in the afternoon, Sir James took a hopeful view of the Ulster situation.—(P. 5.)

By 48 votes to 18 the Provisional Parliament yesterday approved the Government's proposal to establish military courts. The details will be discussed today.—(P. 5.)

The Minister for Defence in the Provisional Government said yesterday in Parliament that the Press Censorship had not been abolished, but had been reduced almost to a vanishing point.—(P. 5.)

Details of an agreement reached with Southern Unionists in the matter of the constitution of the Senate have been published in an official memorandum which we print this morning.—(P. 6.)

A Government motion calling for the abolition of parish and district courts will be submitted to the Provisional Parliament to-day.—(P. 5.)

ABROAD

King Constantine of Greece has abdicated, following a political revolt of the Navy and Army and the resignation of the Government.—(P. 5.)

Russia demands to be allowed to participate in the proposed Near East Peace Conference. She will not recognise any agreement in the matter of the future of the Straits unless she is a party to it.—(P. 5.)

A Constantinople message says that Kemal Pasha has replied to the British demand that his forces shall evacuate the neutral zone by saying that he does not know of the existence of a neutral zone.—(P. 5.)

SPORTING.

At the Maze yesterday Mr. J. O'Neill's Navan Lass won the King's Plate.—(P. 3.)

At Newmarket Prince Herod won the Newmarket October Handicap.—(P. 3.)

COMMERCIAL

London Stock Markets opened firmly, but owing to public neglect finished barely steady.—(P. 7.)

Money was more plentiful in Lombard street, but rates remained firm. The foreign exchanges were weaker.—(P. 7.)

Dublin Stock Market was idle and dull.—(P. 7.)

Military Courts.

Yesterday the Provisional Government asked Parliament to endow the national Army with far-reaching powers. The resolution which was moved by President Cosgrave demands Parliamentary approval for the establishment of military courts which will try persons charged with acts hostile to the State and will punish those who may be found guilty. The specified acts include attacks on the national forces, destruction of property and the unauthorised possession of bombs or firearms. The proposed penalties include death, imprisonment, fines and deportation. By the adoption of this resolution Parliament would put in the Army's hands all the sanctions of the high, the middle and the low justice over the whole civil population of Southern Ireland. Parliament was fully justified, therefore, in scanning the Government's project with a searching eye. The propriety of the demand must be tested by the answers to two questions. Does the national situation exact these grave and stringent measures? Can the national Army be trusted with these formidable powers? We think that the Government's answer to the former question will satisfy the country that an enlargement of the Army's powers of defence is a public necessity. The troops are handicapped seriously to-day by the comparative ease with which every sort of outrage can be committed on themselves and on the people's life and property. This immunity will exist no longer if persons suspected of murder, looting or bridge-breaking can be brought to prompt and fair trial and, if they are found guilty, can receive prompt and fair punishment. Parliament accepted this fact yesterday when it accepted the "principle" of the Government's resolution by a majority of thirty votes.

We agree heartily with Mr. Milroy's tribute to the national Army. It has put the whole country under a heavy debt of gratitude. Hastily organised and equipped, it has fulfilled peculiarly difficult tasks with courage, cheerfulness and restraint. The Army is not responsible for its own chief defects, which are that it is too small, that it is to some extent untrained, and that many of its officers are lacking in military education and experience. We cannot ignore this lack of education and experience when we are considering the establishment of military courts in which young officers—assisted, it is true, but not controlled, by a legal expert—would have drastic powers over the lives and freedom of Irish citizens. Mr. Thomas Johnson and other speakers suggested that military courts might be employed deliberately for purposes of tyranny and revenge. A greater danger, we think, is that excitement or inexperience might result, quite honestly, in some sad miscarriages of justice. Ministers spoke yesterday of the strain and hardship which a desperate guerrilla warfare puts upon the spirit of the troops—of cruel traps and surprises, of the sudden and heartless taking of gallant life. Their speeches were effective arguments for the establishment of courts which will discourage these crimes. Such courts, however, ought to operate in a different atmosphere from that which ambush and outrage have created. While putting terror into the hearts of law-breakers, they ought to command the respect and confidence of every good subject of the State.

Parliament's decision yesterday is no reflection on the wisdom of the Government or on the character of the national Army. It admits the need of courts which will reinforce the Army's powers to suppress rebellion and to re-establish peace and security in the land. There is always a risk, however, in interference with the normal processes of law and in the upsetting of institutions that centuries have woven into the very fabric of civilised society. The risk is especially clear to the legal mind, which realises the importance of precedent; and the country will not lightly disregard the misgivings of that distinguished lawyer, Mr. FitzGibbon, K.C., who, with his colleagues from Dublin University, has given loyal support to the Provisional Government. The risk is only justified by grave emergency; but there can be no doubt that such an emergency exists in Southern Ireland, and that the Government is doing its duty in asking Parliament to endow the Army with exceptional powers. The necessity of the proposed military courts is accepted. It will be Parliament's duty, in Committee to-day, to define the authority of these courts, to make them sure and faithful instruments of justice, and to safeguard in every possible way the rights of the individual citizen and the supremacy of the State.

Constantine.

The news of King Constantine's abdication will be received with mixed feelings by the British people. Since Byron's days the struggle of Hellas for freedom has been watched with much sympathy by Britain. For the man who has been Greece's evil genius, however, there will be no pity. Constantine sowed the wind; now he is reaping the whirlwind. History will deal very hardly with this ambitious monarch. He was put on his throne by Britain, France and Russia in 1913, and ever since that time he has been intriguing and working against them. His aim has been a Greater Hellas, not because he has any particular love for the country of his adoption, but because he is obsessed with personal vanity. His whole career has been modelled on that of William of Hohenzollern, his hero and brother-in-law. The future of Greece is obscure and unhopeful. A magnificent opportunity has been lost. When in 1917 the Allies secured the abdication of the King the hopes of Hellas ran very high. A splendid destiny lay before her. That great Cretan, M. Venizelos, stood at the head of affairs, and his magnificent work for the Allied cause assured him of their special favour. At the Peace Conference M. Venizelos achieved all his desires. Greater Hellas became an accomplished fact. Smyrna was restored to the motherland from which it had been divorced for so many centuries. Thrace and the islands became Greek again, and M. Venizelos held an honoured place among the statesmen of the world. Then disaster fell. Misled by cunning agitation, the people of Greece denied their champion and recalled their traitor king. They immediately forfeited the friendship of France, and, although Britain continued to support their cause, she could not forget the part which Constantine had played during the war. Back on his throne, this foolish king abandoned himself to the lust for power. He was not content with M. Venizelos's achievements. He saw himself as a second Alexander, leading victorious Greece to world conquests, and began to perfect his plans for the seizure of Constantinople and the final annihilation of the Turks. He was warned by the Allies times without number. They saw the growing peril of Kemalist nationalism and began to despair of Greece; but Constantine recked nothing of that. He launched his attack on the Turkish forces last year, sealing his country's doom. Now the blow has fallen. Greece has lost everything that M. Venizelos won, and Constantine has been hounded from the throne by the people who were acclaiming him a hero eighteen months ago. His fate is hard, but it is no harder than he deserves. Nemesis has overtaken the last of the Teuton kings.

Irish Cattle.

We are glad to learn that the Scottish farmers have taken up the cudgels on behalf of the Irish cattle trade, and that an influential deputation waited on Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen in London yesterday. Scotland, according to her farmers' spokesman, will be wanting some 120,000 Irish stores within the next few months, and the regulations of the Board of Agriculture are likely to prevent her from getting them. Some time ago an order was promulgated, as a result of the foot-and-mouth disease scare, limiting the places in Scotland where Irish stores could be kept and sold to six markets—at Forfar, Fife, Stirling, Edinburgh, Kincardine and Laurencekirk. Recently the order was extended to another two markets—at St. Boswell's, Roxburgh, and Belmont, Aberdeen—but these eight are the only places where Irish cattle may be received, and even here a six days' detention order is in force. The Scottish farmers and auctioneers explained to the Minister of Agriculture that these unnecessary restrictions had interfered seriously with the cattle trade between Ireland and Scotland. Irish breeders will not send their beasts to Scotland on the "off chance" of a sale, while Scottish farmers in remote districts are unwilling to bear the expense of travelling long distances to make their purchases. There is no reason in the world why these regulations should not be revoked; for Ireland is perfectly free from foot-and-mouth disease. The Irish farmers will be grateful to their Scottish colleagues for their initiative, but surely it is time that Ireland should speak for herself.

Revenue from Roulette.

The Soviet Government of Russia seems, in one town at any rate, to have solved the tiresome problem of Budgets that will not balance. Some months ago it leased to a private undertaking a big pavilion in the Hermitage Garden in Petrograd, and this company now is providing enormous revenues for the State. The pavilion has been transformed into a gigantic gambling den, complete with roulette tables, petits chevaux, and the various other attractions which part the fool from his money; and thousands of millions of roubles are lost and won every night. Fifty stalwart Red Guards stand sentinel over the gaming tables, despite the decree of the Soviet prohibiting gambling in any shape or form, which was issued only a month ago. Kameneff, who has succeeded Lenin at the head of affairs in Moscow, recognises, apparently, that revenue must be raised somehow, and, as nobody seems to be inclined to pay any taxes, principle must bow the head to expediency. The example of Petrograd is spreading throughout Russia. All the large towns have their casinos, and the gambling which takes place puts even Monte Carlo in the shade. In Petrograd alone, out of a total revenue of 80,000,000,000 roubles which was collected in May of the present year, no less than 70,000,000,000 were contributed by gambling dens and totalisators. Public morality in Russia has been killed by the Bolshevist system, and the fact that the State depends on vice for its revenue is a damning commentary on the new régime.

OBITUARY.

MR. CLAUDE PLUNKET COGHILL.

Mr. Claude P. Coghill died at his residence, Frankville, Athboy, Co. Meath, yesterday morning. Born in 1859 at Glen Barrahane, Castletownshend, Co. Cork, he was the second son of the late Sir John Coghill, fourth Baronet. He was a Justice of the Peace for the County Meath and a member of the Church of Ireland, and was a regular attendant at the Church Synod. He had been in failing health for the past year. His death is deeply regretted by all who knew him.

REV. THOMAS HARDY, C.M.

We regret to announce the death of the Rev. Thomas Hardy, C.M., St. Peter's, Phibsborough, which took place yesterday. Father Hardy commenced his career in Castleknock, and having passed to the Irish College, Rome, he returned to Castleknock, of which he was president for some years. Later he joined the missionary staff at St. Peter's, Phibsborough. He spent upwards of 50 years in the priesthood. The funeral will take place to St. Joseph's, Blackrock, immediately after Requiem Office and Mass at 11 o'clock to-morrow.

THE LATE EARL SPENCER.

The funeral of Earl Spencer will take place to-morrow at Althorp. The body will be removed from London on that day. Sympathetic telegrams have been received from the King and the Prince of Wales.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND THE RIFLE BRIGADE.

The Second Rifle Brigade was inspected by the Duke of Connaught at Farnborough yesterday, before its departure for the Near East. In a special order issued to the men, His Royal Highness said that the glorious record of the Rifle Brigade made him feel confident that the duties which the battalion had to perform would be carried out with the same spirit and devotion as in the past.

COURT AND PERSONAL.

Queen Alexandra, accompanied by Princess Victoria, and with the Hon. Charlotte Knollys and General Sir Dighton Probyn in attendance, visited the very successful puppy show of the West Norfolk Hunt, and distributed the prizes to the successful exhibitors.

Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles, who are staying with the Earl and Countess of Harewood at Harewood House, hope to take up their residence at Goldsborough Hall in the middle of next month, when the extensive renovations now in progress will be completed.

* * *

To-day the Earl of Ypres celebrates his seventieth birthday. He is the only son of the late Captain John Tracey French, R.N., and entered the Army in 1874. He has received the thanks of Parliament and a grant of £50,000, was created a Viscount in 1916, and was advanced to an Earldom in 1921. His only son and heir, the Hon. John French, is married to the daughter of the late Major-General John and niece of the Countess of Charlemont.

* * *

The Earl of Rosse, who is sixteen to-day, succeeded his father, the fifth Earl, in 1918. He is the great-grandson of the third Earl, the famous man of science, whose magnificent telescope, erected at a cost of over £20,000, on his estate at Birr, was instrumental in many astronomical discoveries during the past seventy years. The present peer has one brother and one sister, and their mother, who is a daughter of Mr. Cecil Lister-Kaye, married secondly, in 1920, Viscount De Vesci.

* * *

Viscount and Viscountess Bury, Lord and Lady Skerrington, Lady Fitzgerald, Lady Holt, Lady Aitchison, and Sir George Welby are among the latest arrivals at Bath.

* * *

The Marchioness of Granby, whose serious illness caused much anxiety, is now beginning to make slow progress towards recovery. She is at Stanton Woodhouse, the Duke of Rutland's place in Derbyshire, where she and the Marquis of Granby chiefly reside. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tennant, are with her at present.

* * *

Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Richard P. Butler, O.B.E., who is fifty to-day, succeeded his father as eleventh Baronet in 1909. His family have been settled in County Carlow for many generations, and no fewer than six of the Baronets represented the county in Parliament between 1634 and 1800. The present Baronet, who was formerly in the King's Royal Rifle Corps, served in South Africa, and again in the late war, and was mentioned in despatches. He married the daughter of the Very Rev. the Hon. James Wentworth Leigh, and has one son and two daughters, and one of his sisters is the wife of the Bishop of Meath.

* * *

The Earl and Countess of Bessborough will arrive at their London residence to-day from Foley House, Lymington, where they have spent the early autumn. Mrs. Herbert Domvile has left Salerno, Killiney, and has taken a house in Surrey. Mr. Pennoyer has just purchased St. Donat's Castle, Glamorganshire, one of the historic homes of England. He and Lady Winifred Pennoyer, who is sister of the Marquis of Anglesey and the Countess of Pembroke, hope to take up their residence at the Castle in the middle of next month.

Dr. J. B. McArevey has taken up his residence at 51 Lower Baggot street.

MARRIAGE OF MAJOR BRACKLEY, D.S.O., AND MISS MOND.

A quiet wedding, but one with unusual features, was that of Major Herbert George Brackley, D.S.O., D.S.C., R.A.F., and Miss Frida H. Mond, elder daughter of Mr. R. L. Mond, J.P., which took place at All Saints' Church, Margaret street, London, W., yesterday.

Sir A. Mond, uncle of the bride, gave her away, as her father is an invalid.

The clergy, three in number, were arrayed in magnificent vestments. Handsome yellow and white satin cushions, with prayer stools covered with yellow satin cloths, were provided for the bride and bridegroom. The register was signed in the church as soon as the bride and bridegroom were pronounced man and wife, while the Ave Maria was sung. Afterwards High Mass was celebrated.

The bridegroom wore morning dress, and his bride a gown of white brocaded silk, caught on the hips by pearl ornaments. Her beautiful veil of Brussels lace hung over her face, and completely covered her gown, forming a short train. The Duke of Newcastle was present in his capacity of Churchwarden. The honeymoon will be spent in Devonshire, and in about a month's time the bride and bridegroom will go to Japan, where they first met.

New and exquisite Ribbons, just received, will be a feature of Switzer's Grafton street windows to-day.

SIR JAMES CRAIG AND ULSTER.

THE AMERICAN TARIFF.

Sir James Craig, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, returned to Ulster yesterday, after his conference with Mr. Churchill in London. He travelled by the Stranraer and Larne route.

In a few days Sir James will confer with his colleagues in the Ulster Cabinet with reference to the resumption of the session of the Northern Parliament on October 10.

Before he left London he was asked if he had any statement to make about his various visits to Mr. Churchill.

Sir James replied:—"We have got past the somewhat acute times which evoked some previous statements by me. We have got down to solid business, and I think I may safely say we are getting on. I am very much concerned just now over the United States Tariff, in so far as it affects Ulster, but I am not without hope that even this difficulty may be smoothed away or modified. The change is a very sweeping one, and it hits Ulster pretty hard."

Presiding at a Sale of Work, in aid of the Y.M.C.A., at Ballymena yesterday afternoon, Sir James Craig said that he had nothing to say about the future, except what was hopeful. He arrived from London that morning, and had had an opportunity there of discussing the future with many of their old friends and staunch colleagues. The first and last to be seen, and the first in their memories, was Lord Carson, whose intense enthusiasm and interest in the people and cause of Ulster were as great as ever.

It was only right that he (Sir James) should say, frankly, that there were many fences still to be got over, perhaps in the near future, but the same dogged determination, the same patience, the same loyalty one to another, as had enabled the Ulster people to weather the storms of the past 18 months, would enable them to get over all fences, no matter how high they might be.

He was intensely hopeful that the worst was behind them, and that the best was still in front. Therefore, it was only for them, and others throughout the six counties, to continue that loyalty to the Government, which was watchful of their interests, in order to secure a sound foundation on which they could build an edifice that they hoped would, in the future, stand as a great landmark in Ulster history.

BLIND MAN AS PARLIAMENTARY CANDIDATE.

The Labour Party of the Mossley Division of Lancaster have selected Mr. D. B. Lawley, of Blackburn, as their prospective candidate, in opposition to Mr. Austin Hopkinson, the sitting member. Mr. Lawley lost his sight several years ago, when he was a student, in the gold mines of British Columbia.

LONDON LETTER.

CONSTANTINE GOES.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

The long expected has taken place at last in Athens, and King Constantine has again abdicated the throne which he has filled with such ill success. The dramatic news came to London this afternoon, following many telegrams reporting a swift revolution brought about by the Greek Navy and Army. So far there has been no bloodshed, and it is probable that the King will be allowed to leave Athens in safety for another country. There is no mention of Queen Sophie in the news, but it was reported only a few days ago that she was in Germany. Ever since he became King of the Hellenes in 1913 Constantine has been a source of trouble and danger to the Allies, and it seemed nothing to him that he owed his throne to Great Britain, France and Russia.

All through the earlier years of the war Constantine and his German Queen did all that they could to hamper the policy of the Allies in the Near East; and it was only by the strenuous exertions of M. Venizelos that Greece was prevented from openly proclaiming her adherence to the Central Powers. This unsatisfactory position was ended in 1917 when, at the demand of the Allies, Constantine abdicated and retired to Switzerland with the Queen and the Crown Prince, then debarred from the succession. Prince Alexander, the King's second son, became King of the Hellenes and died tragically in 1920 from the result of a monkey's bite. Then came the rout of the Venizelist Government, followed by the recall of Constantine after a plebiscite. Within two years Constantine's ambitions regarding Constantinople and the guardianship of the Dardanelles, with the possession of Smyrna, have again thrown his country into the melting-pot.

THE DUKE OF SPARTA.

It is said that the demand of the revolutionists is that the Duke of Sparta shall succeed the King, but it is by no means certain that he will accept the throne. His sympathies are said to march with those of his father, and in such an event he would not prove acceptable to the Venizelists, who, presumably, will come into power again. The Duke, who is thirty-two, is considered one of the most handsome princes of Europe. He stands nearly 6ft. 5in. in height and weighs about 19 stone. He is of a studious disposition, although quite an athlete. The Duke went through some naval training in this country before he joined the Greek Navy, in which he served for some years.

Should the Duke of Sparta not become King, it is quite possible that Prince Christopher of Greece, a brother of King Constantine, who is very well known in London, may succeed, since he is next in the line. It may be remembered that the Prince married a very wealthy American lady, Mrs. Leeds, who after many rumours to the contrary, married the Prince as an equal and can thus become Queen of the Hellenes should her husband succeed. Last year the only son of Mrs. Leeds was married to Princess Xenia, daughter of the Grand Duchess George of Russia.

M. VENIZELOS.

The most important thing about the news is that Constantine, in abdicating, is following the example of his patron, the ex-Kaiser, and his departure will give a fresh and most important turn to the Near Eastern crisis. It may mark the return of M. Venizelos to power, or, at least, to work for his country again. M. Venizelos is not a mainland Greek, but comes from the Ægean islands, and this is said to detract somewhat from his popularity in Greece. It seems certain, however, that he desires nothing better than to serve his country in any way. It is understood that he has already been approached on this matter, and will lose no time in deciding upon his action.

The situation is rather better to-night as regards the Near East by reason of the fact that Kemal Pasha has sent an answer to Sir Charles Harington in reply to the demand that the Turkish troops shall withdraw from the neutral zone. The reply does not carry matters much further, but it agrees with the desires of the Allies that there shall be no incidents. It is not now expected that Kemal Pasha will answer the Allies' Note until he has seen M. Franklin Bouillon, the French Special Envoy, who is due to arrive at Smyrna to-morrow.

The Prime Minister is said to have expressed the view to his entourage that the crisis is now past the perilous point. He thinks that the conference will be held and carry out its functions, and, once the Near East question is settled, he will try to adjust the reparations and war debts trouble.

Politicians are beginning to return to London after the holidays, though the opening of Parliament is, apparently, still some weeks off. Among those seen about the West End during the past few days have been Dr. Macnamara, Colonel Amery, Mr. MacCallum Scott, Mr. Neal, Mr. McCurdy, Mr. Pratt, and Sir William Sutherland.

The members of the Cabinet have been much in evidence during the past few days, but most of them come to London only for the day and then return to the country. The Prime Minister came to London this afternoon to preside over a Committee of the Cabinet, and to-morrow will hold a full meeting of that body.

THE PREMIER'S BOOK.

Mr. Curtis Brown, the literary agent, who arranged for the publication of Mr. Lloyd George's book on the war, is about to leave London for the United States. He has been receiving further offers for the right of publication, and among the latest are offers from China and Bulgaria. It is now becoming evident that the sum of £90,000 expected as the receipts will be considerably larger. The Prime Minister will have a very large amount of money at his disposal for charity once he gets the work finished. He is said to be strongly impressed with the idea that he is writing his book in the country's time and from material acquired during his service, and consequently feels that the financial profits should go to the country in one form or another.

The representatives of the Canadian Ministry of Agriculture, who have just arrived in London for the cattle embargo conference, bring good reports from the Dominion. They say that Canada has enjoyed a bumper wheat harvest, following on a magnificent hay harvest, and that there are plentiful supplies of winter fodder. With regard to the cattle question, they point out that the shipment of steers into this country will increase the shipment of pure-bred British live stock of all kinds—cattle, sheep, and hogs—into Canada. The Dominion will require pure-bred sires from British herds, and generally increased trade will result.

Sir Sidney Lee has been making such good progress with his authorised life of the late King Edward that he hopes it will be completed in time for publication next spring. The work is to be in two volumes, and it is expected that it will throw considerable new light upon the real attitude of King Edward towards foreign affairs and will effectively refute certain statements ascribed to him by German and Austrian writers.

MILLS PARTIALLY CLOSED.

Owing to the complete stoppage of the ordinary means of transit, and the difficulties and risks of road transport, Messrs. Hallinan and Sons have partially closed down their flour mills at Avoncore, Midleton, and 50 men have been thrown out of employment. The local distillery has also been closed.

PROPOSAL FOR MILITARY COURTS.

PARLIAMENT'S APPROVAL OF PRINCIPLE.

VIGOROUS OPPOSITION BY LABOUR.

DISCUSSION OF DETAILS FIXED FOR TO-DAY.

By 48 votes against 18, the Provisional Parliament yesterday passed a resolution endorsing the principle involved in the Government's proposal to establish military courts for the trial of persons charged with certain offences.

The details of the scheme will be discussed to-day. The Government proposes to give these courts power to inflict penalties, ranging from a fine to death, on any person convicted of taking part in or abetting any attack on national forces; looting or destroying public or private property; having arms or explosives; a breach of a general order made by the Army authorities.

SUMMARY OF DEBATE.

WHY THE POWER IS NEEDED.

(BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

In view of the importance of yesterday's debate in the Provisional Parliament, the attendance at Leinster House was very disappointing. The Treasury benches were well filled, and the Labour Party was in its usual full force, but the back benches were sparsely occupied.

The Army resolutions were introduced by President Cosgrave. Somehow he did not seem to be as confident as usual, and most of his remarks were confined to an attack on Mr. Rory O'Connor, who, he said, was afraid to leave his cell in Mountjoy Jail, for fear of being shot accidentally.

TACTLESS.

In this connection also he made what some of us might consider to be a rather tactless reference to "Lord French." Comparing this great Irishman with Mr. O'Connor, he said that Lord French, at any rate, did go through at least one ambush, and that he was not afraid to leave the Viceregal Lodge, for fear of being accidentally shot. The Earldom of Ypres was not conferred on Field-Marshal French for nothing; and, after all, he has done some fighting in his day. This, however, is merely by the way. Mr. Cosgrave's case for the strengthening of the Army's powers, of course, was unimpeachable, but one cannot but think that it would have been far more effective had it been put before the House in a less personal way.

Mr. Desmond Fitzgerald, who seconded the resolutions, avoided personalities, but made a very strong speech. The Government, he said, must not allow itself to be prevented by considerations of mawkishness or by humanitarian catch-cries from the pursuit of its duty. Ireland is fighting for her life. The Army is her only protector; therefore, it must be given full powers to deal with her enemies.

WITH GLOVES OFF.

Mr. Thomas Johnson for once discarded his customary air of suavity, and attacked the Government horse, foot, and guns. "The trifling persiflage" of the President, he declared, was altogether out of keeping with the solemnity of the occasion. The House knew nothing about the military situation, yet it was being asked to consent to the establishment of a military dictatorship which would give the Army powers of life and death over every civilian in the country. He demanded a full and frank statement on military affairs. Was this proposal an S.O.S. from the Army? Could not order be restored without such drastic measures as those which were foreshadowed in the resolutions, and had been sanctioned already by the Government without reference to Parliament? But Mr. Johnson went much farther than that. He objected to endowing an Army of recruits with such extraordinary powers. He cited the Neville and the Colley cases as instances of the sort of thing which would be multiplied if the Army got virtually unlimited powers, because, he said, the Army has no discipline and no traditions. "If," he continued, with the trace of a smile, "as some foolish people allege, I were a true revolutionist, I should encourage young men to join this Army, which, mark you, is a proletarian Army in the main, and turn it against the Government which is trying to give it authority over the people."

Mr. Johnson made a further demand for more information from the Government, and gave a final warning against the entrusting of the lives and liberties of the Irish people into the hands of an immature and inexperienced Army.

MR. MILROY'S REPLY.

Mr. Johnson's speech made an obvious impression on the House, for it was closely reasoned and delivered with much power. Mr. Milroy immediately rose to take the edge off it, and for over half an hour his sonorous voice, at which, as a German officer once said about Hindenburg, you could warm your hands on a winter's night, awoke the echoes of the House. He thundered at Mr. Johnson, hurled scorn at the irregulars, and appealed to the House to show some appreciation of the Army's good work. But for the Army, he exclaimed, this Dail never could meet. It was a good speech, and whoever arranged that Mr. Milroy should follow Mr. Johnson knew what he was doing.

Mr. Kevin O'Higgins made a very able defence of the Government's proposals, in the course of which Mr. Erskine Childers came in for some candid criticism. He spoke with his customary force and presented an excellent case. Mr. Gerald FitzGibbon, K.C., greatly impressed the House by his announcement that he proposed to vote with the Government, but that its proposals gave him "grave misgivings." He appealed to the Ministry to sharpen its definitions, and it was largely as a result of his helpful criticisms that a compromise was reached. The final result was that a motion was passed, by a majority of 48 to 18, approving the Government's proposals in principle, but postponing an irrevocable decision until they shall have been thrashed out in Committee at to-day's meeting of Parliament.

GOVERNMENT'S PROPOSAL.

FULL TEXT OF RESOLUTION.

The following resolution was moved by the Government in the Provisional Parliament yesterday:—

"Whereas the Government has entrusted to the Army the duty of securing the public safety and restoring order throughout the country, and has placed on the Army the responsibility for the establishment of the authority of the Government in all parts of the country in which that authority is challenged by force;

"And whereas the Army authorities have represented to the Government that in order to discharge effectively the duty and responsibility so placed on them, it is essential that the Army authorities should have power to establish Military Courts or Committees, with full powers of enquiring into charges and inflicting punishment on persons found guilty of acts calculated to interfere with or delay the effective establishment of the authority of the Government, and that the Army authorities should have power to detain in places, whether within or without the area of the jurisdiction of the Government, persons arrested by the Army authorities, and power to control the dealing in and possession of firearms;

"And whereas the Government, recognising the force of such representation, has sanctioned the doing by the Army authorities of all or any of the following matters and things:—

"(a) The setting up of Military Courts or Committees for the enquiring into charges against persons in respect of any of the offences hereinafter mentioned, provided, however, that every such Military Court or Committee shall include as a member thereof at least one person nominated by the Minister of Defence and certified by the Law Officer to be a person of legal knowledge and experience.

"(b) The enquiry of such Military Courts or Committees into the cases of persons charged with any of the offences following—that is to say:

"(I.) Taking part in or aiding or abetting any attack upon or using force against the national forces;

"(II.) Looting, arson, destruction, seizure, unlawful possession, or removal of or damage to any public or private property;

"(III.) Having possession without proper authority of any bomb or article in the nature of a bomb, or any dynamite, gelignite, or other explosive substance, or any revolver, rifle, gun, or other firearm or lethal weapon, or any ammunition for any such firearm;

"(IV.) The breach of any general order or regulation made by the Army authorities;

"and the infliction by such Military Courts or Committees of the punishment of death or of imprisonment for any period or of a fine of any amount, either with or without imprisonment, on any person found guilty by any such Court or Committee of any of the offences aforesaid.

"(c) The removal by Army authorities of all or any person taken prisoner, arrested, or detained by the national forces, to any place or places, whether within or without the area of jurisdiction of the Government, and the detention or imprisonment of any such persons in any place or places within or without the area aforesaid.

"(d) The regulation and control of the sale, possession, transfer of, and dealing in revolvers, rifles, guns, and other firearms.

"Now, this Dail, being of opinion that the doing by the Army authorities of the several matters aforesaid is a matter of military necessity, doth hereby ratify and approve of the sanction given by the Government and of the doing by the Army authorities of all or any of the acts and matters aforesaid."

PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

POSITION EXPLAINED.

Mr. Cosgrave, who proposed the adoption of the resolution, said that it was of very great importance to the Dail, and in entering into the reason why it was put down, one must inquire into the position that had been created by the irregular attacks upon the national army, and what it really meant at this moment. An attempt was being made to overthrow that Parliament, and it was a direct challenge to the Government.

One reason put forward for the attacks by the irregulars was that the Treaty had been accepted under duress. The people had a right to accept the Treaty. It was open to them to accept war as the alternative, but no one could say that the people were bound to accept war. He asked what was the machinery available if the irregular onslaught were to succeed? So far as that House knew there was no political machinery available if this armed outbreak were to succeed in its attack upon the national forces.

It was not necessary to go into the condition of the country. This rebellion was destroying the industry of the nation, destroying life, damaging public and private property, and menacing public security. It was injuring the health of the people, and endangering the future generations. It had also given rise to a new propaganda. He had seen two publications by those supporting this warfare, and one was amazed to note the degree of satisfaction expressed by these publicists, when soldiers acting under the authority of that Parliament were injured and maimed in the streets by ambushes, or attacks of one sort or another.

HIGHWAYMEN.

This particular rebellion had created a new order in the community—the highwaymen who commandeered property, and loot and destroy to such an extent that he believed that in certain places the people's means of livelihood had been destroyed.

Let them go back a few months and consider the position of the men who seized the Four Courts. If they were military people who took part in that attack, they might claim to be treated as soldiers, and if their action was political there should be some body of opinion supporting their action. As a military proposition, he did not think that there was anything in what happened to entitle these people to much consideration, and the newspapers had reported that in more than one case in the country, when the people grumbled at the attacks of the irregulars, they were told: "This is your reward for having voted for the people you elected at the recent election."

A document had been forwarded recently to the Minister of Defence signed by a gentleman called Norbert O'Connor, and one would expect that he was a brother of the gentleman who was in charge at the Four Courts—and it appeared that that gentleman had now shed so much of his military glory that he was afraid that he would meet his death in Mountjoy Prison by being accidentally shot.

Now, certainly, on one occasion within the last week or ten days that gentleman, or an agent on his behalf, attempted to bribe the guard at Mountjoy with a view to getting out, and if he or any other prisoner attempted to escape, and if the only means of preventing his escape was that he should be shot, the Government was taking full responsibility for giving orders to shoot such escaping prisoners. (Hear, hear).

This gentleman, who had lost his military glory and prestige, commenced to cry and was afraid of being accidentally shot, and compared his present position with that of Lord French, who at least, went through one very severe ambush. At any rate, Lord French was not afraid to stir out of his house fearing that he would be accidentally shot, and he had opportunities of using his authority, if he were so advised, and telling the people of England, and some of the people of Ireland, that he was afraid to leave his house, fearing that he would be accidentally shot.

PREPARED FOR PEACE.

This military experiment of a small minority had been forced upon the Government. The representatives of the people accepted that military experiment under duress, and tried to end the matter in a peaceable way, and leave no bitterness so far as they were concerned. "And even now, two or three months afterwards," said Mr. Cosgrave, "we are prepared, even at this hour—but there must be no armed truce—we are prepared to accept a peace truce, not an armed truce—they can have it at any moment on a surrender of arms to this Parliament, which is the Parliament of the people, and this Parliament can be generous, but it must be just." (Hear, hear.)

The Government were not entitled to barter terms with these people, because they had no hesitation in putting to the people what exactly the position was, as they saw it, and what they were prepared to do. There must be political freedom in this country, and there must be liberty, but it must be liberty without licence, and there must be no armed forces outside the control of the people's Government.

In these resolutions the Government asked for certain powers for the Army which those responsible for the Army considered were necessary. If murderous attacks took place, those participating in these attacks must learn that they had got to pay the price for them. Hitherto they had perfect liberty to attack their soldiers, knowing that they would suffer no greater penalty than internment—they went away smiling and laughing at the destruction they had wrought. They must be taught that the Government was not going to suffer the soldiers to be maimed, crippled and killed without, at least, bringing those responsible for the destruction before a tribunal that would deal out justice to them.

SUPPORT FOR ARMY.

Soldiers were serving in the National Army at great personal risk, and in some cases had left comfortable positions behind them to secure for the people the rights that they had won. The people of Ireland had now got certain political rights recognised generally throughout the world. The Government were the immediate custodians of these rights. They had to see the machinery set up and the Army equipped, and that Army would get the full support of the Government of the people in carrying out its duties. The resolution had been submitted to show that there was a Government prepared to take the responsibility of governing. (Hear, hear.)

The Government were prepared to place on the table of the House the Army regulations issued in connection with the resolution, and allow two, three or four days to elapse before they would be put into force and before action would be taken on them as outlined in the resolution. The Government had felt for a very considerable time that the Army were entitled to the powers proposed under the resolution.

It was hoped from the beginning that they might be able to crush this rebellion without resorting to such stern measures of justice as were outlined, but the absolute disregard of life, and the suffering caused by the continuance of these irregular attacks, plainly indicated to the Government that protection was due to their soldiers, and for that reason this resolution, which he formally moved.

FIGHTING FOR LIFE.

Mr. Desmond Fitzgerald, Minister for Foreign Affairs, seconded the motion. He said that the country at this moment was fighting for its life in a way in which possibly it never fought before, because its life was threatened more imminently than at any time in its history. It was the duty of everybody in Ireland, without distinction, to take up the work of defending the country.

The Army was responsible to them, and, inasmuch, as the Army was responsible to them, they were responsible to the Army, and it was their duty unflinchingly to put into the hands of the Army every power which was necessary for them to carry out the work entrusted to their hands, and to carry it out as expeditiously as possible. It was no time for any quibbling about legality or anything else. They were faced with grim fact, and legal quibbles or humanitarian catch-cries, or things like that, had no meaning and no place in the present situation. The nation was more important than any face-saving or any consideration of the things that might be said about them.

This work had to be grappled with efficiently, and to do this it was necessary to put full power into the hands of the Army. It was "up to" them to see that the Army had all the powers it required for carrying out the work entrusted to it. In the late war against the British they had to put practically unlimited powers in the hands of their soldiers, and they had no alternative but to escape altogether or to face death. The result was that a very high moral standard was maintained in the ranks of the Volunteers at that time. They had no time for looting.

"SAFE JOB."

Now they were faced with bands of men undertaking a comparatively safe job. The general lines seemed to be to "maintain the Republic" as long as feasible, and when it was no longer feasible to see that they were in a sound financial position. When it was even chances that this country, which had maintained its struggle for freedom for 750 years, was going to succumb at last to her own domestic foes, they were not going to quibble or shirk any responsibility that they felt they should take, and they were determined to leave nothing undone that might be necessary for the efficient carrying on of their present task.

They were going to make it plain to the people who thought that law was a thing that existed in the past and no longer existed, that the law necessary for the country's existence was going to be enforced, and they were not going to be turned aside by any mawkishness. They would exact from the Army an account of the use that they made of those powers, and they expected that the Army would realise the responsibility that was being placed upon its shoulders, and they intended to see that the Army carried out its work in a suitable way.

If they were going to save this country they could only do it by putting their backbone into the work, and it was no good for deputies—if they intended to do so—to move pious emendations and restrictions.

LABOUR'S ONSLAUGHT.

Mr. Thomas Johnson (Labour, Mid-Dublin) said that the speech of the President in introducing that momentous resolution was trifling with a very serious position. They had an introduction dealing with the character of Mr. Rory O'Connor, and one would imagine that they were dealing with a casual resolution in a debating society.

Then the Minister for Foreign Affairs came along and said that the real reason was that the life of the nation was at stake. Surely if such was the position it was no time for the trifing persiflage of the President. One had a right to expect that there would have been a review of the military position and a thorough examination of the position before such a resolution was placed before them. But they were again asked to confirm certain things that had been done by the Ministry without any information as to the reason why those things should be done.

The resolution read in part, "Whereas the Government has entrusted to the Army the duty of securing the public safety and restoring order throughout the country, and has placed on the Army the responsibility for the establishment of the authority of the Government in all parts of the country in which that authority is challenged by force"; and "Whereas the Government recognising the force of such representations has sanctioned the doing by the Army authorities of all or any of the following matters and things . . ."

The Government—the Ministry—had sanctioned the Army doing these things. When was it sanctioned? Would they produce in writing the form which that sanction was given, and what had happened since that sanction was given to necessitate the bringing forward of this resolution?

REASONS WANTED.

When they were dealing with what was so serious a matter—the doing of which was in effect the handing over to the Army military power over every person in the country, setting up by the power of the Dail a military Dictatorship—that was what they were asked to do—they should at least have some reasons given and a thorough examination and disclosure of the military situation.

Anybody reading that resolution would say that it was a sign, not of strength, but of weakness—an S.O.S. signal that the Army was not capable of dealing with the situation in the country, that it would need to have power over all men, civilians as well as soldiers, in peace or war, in any part of the country.

He wondered if members of the Dail really understood what happened on this occasion. The Government had entrusted powers of life and death to the Army over every citizen. They had a right to know why that was necessary, and they had a right to an examination of the situation. They had got to be candid, and they had got to know what was the relationship between the Army and the Government.

By what authority was the Army acting and what were the responsibilities of the individual soldier in that Army? What law were they acting under? The Army had been granted power. Who conferred that power to set up military courts and try any case that the Army wished, and to punish by death any civilian who broke a general order or regulation made by that Army in the future? A military dictatorship, indeed!

They denounced, everyone of them, military dictatorships in other countries. Russia! But in Russia they had the grace to set up a special court to try their cases. Conceivably it might have been necessary in certain times in the history of certain countries to hand over all power to the army, but at least that army would have been working under regulations which were known; that army had a tradition and an experience and an understanding of civil life.

ARMY OF "NOVICES."

They did not want to decry the character of the army, but it was an army of novices—everyone of them recruits—and in practice it would have this power of life and death over civilians and over soldiers without public trial. They wanted to know when this sanction was given by the Government to the army to set up those courts; they wanted to know if anything had been done in recent weeks to make it necessary that this power should be sanctioned, thereby making them to some degree legal.

He predicted with very great sorrow that if that order was passed they would learn of many more cases like that of Colley and Neville and other men who had lost their lives, and for which no explanation had been given in the courts or to the public. There was great danger, indeed, that they were going to multiply that state of things in Dublin. They had not got within their army to-day that perfect discipline and control which would prevent a fearful disaster from coming upon the good name of this country.

"You are going to make it possible," declared Mr. Johnson, "for many dark deeds to be done by an army which is not in the public eye, which has no command over all its units, and in which the discipline is not satisfactory—and no one will claim that it is."

A certain man (he proceeded) had been taken out of his place of employment, taken into the country and shot—an ordinary murder. His body lay in the Morgue, and his friends came to visit it, and to pray. And military forces came up in lorries and armoured cars and arrested those men, and denounced them and threatened them, and said that if the man had not been carrying a gun he would not have been shot. That happened in the case of Neville. That was an act of indiscipline, and he was confident that the Minister of Defence would not defend it. If that sort of thing was possible now, it would be much more likely to happen under these orders and regulations.

LAWYERS.

It was provided that these courts should be provided with a person of legal knowledge and experience, but they had the President's testimony to the effect that very many of the

IMPROVED SERVICES REPORTED.

WORKERS' REPLY TO POSTMASTER.

From the statements issued by the Postal Workers' Joint Executive it would appear that postal and telegraphic services in Southern Ireland are virtually at a stop.

The Postmaster-General, on the other hand, reports improved telegraphic and postal facilities. It is stated officially that the whole indoor and outdoor staffs at Nenagh have resumed duty.

Another official announcement states that deliveries of letters by postmen will be made in the City of Dublin as soon as the remaining branch offices are in working order. Also, it is announced that permanent schemes for letter-box collections and for the delivery of telegrams, which will result in expedition and economy, are being completed.

Arrangements for dealing with parcels are, it is said, under consideration, and, pending their completion, the public are asked to avail themselves of means of transit which are unaffected by the temporary dislocation of Post Office business.

Picketing went on yesterday as usual in the vicinity of the Dublin sorting and telegraph offices, as well as near the Telephone Exchange, but there were no exciting incidents.

To-night a mass meeting of workers is announced to take place in the Mansion House, under the auspices of the Joint Unions' Executive.

Rumours of intervention by the Labour Party and others do not appear to have any solid foundation. The Labour Party say that they have no knowledge of any such move.

POSITION YESTERDAY.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

An official announcement issued by the Post Office last night states:—

The Rink staff, Dublin, has been further increased by five, including one established officer; the Amiens street Telegraph Office by one, and the operating staff at Crown alley Exchange by one. In the Sligo district postmen are on strike at five sub-offices only out of 72; in the Gorey district two additional postmen have returned; at Cobh (Queenstown) six additional postmen have returned, the present position being that only six out of a staff of 31 are on strike. In the Monaghan district 15 additional postmen have resumed; in the Bray district four additional postmen have resumed, and at Nenagh all the indoor and outdoor men have returned. At Dun Laoghaire (Kingstown) four men are on duty, in addition to the post-master, for mail work.

The total number of bags despatched from the Rink yesterday was 501. These included bags to 159 offices throughout Ireland, as well as despatches to Great Britain, thus marking a big increase on previous days.

433 bags were received, being mails from Great Britain and from practically every county in Ireland. All mails reaching Dublin stations were brought to the Rink, and letters were delivered to over 2,000 callers at the Rink.

At Amiens street Central Telegraph Office the number of telegrams forwarded by wire was 625. The number received by wire was over 1,700, and the number transmitted 673.

6,000 words "Press" were forwarded. Over 1,700 telegrams were delivered by messengers in and about Dublin, and over 550 were transmitted by post to places where telegraphic communication is interrupted. The increase in telegraph work is being maintained. In the forenoon yesterday the average delay amounted to four hours, but this was reduced to one hour in the evening.

James's street Post Office will be open between the hours of 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. for the delivery of letters to callers from the following districts:—Kilmainham, Inchicore, Kingsbridge, Coombe, and the South Circular road area west of Donore avenue.

The hours during which Portobello Post Office and Ballsbridge Post Office will be open for delivery of letters to callers are 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The Post Office at College Green will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. On and from to-day Army and Navy allowances, old age pensions, Savings Bank withdrawals, money orders and postal orders drawn on Dublin, Portobello, James's street, Ballsbridge, and Phibsborough will be paid at College Green Post Office until further notice.

The public in Dublin and district who have not a telegraphic address are requested to have the full postal address given on telegrams sent to them—i.e., the name of the district should invariably be included in the address.

WORKERS' REPLY.

POSTMASTER'S STATEMENT CHALLENGED.

A statement issued last night by the Postal Unions' Joint Executive contained the following:—

"'It is estimated now that over 50 per cent. of the Post Office staff in the 26 counties are performing duty.' This is the statement given to the Press and the public by the Postmaster-General, who knows the facts as they are. What are the facts as known to the Postmaster-General, a member of the Government—a responsible Minister of the first Parliament to function in Ireland in over 100 years? They are these:—It is known to the Postmaster-General that not more than 2 per cent. of the regular Post Office staff in the 26 counties are performing duty.

"With only one male operator in the Central Telegraph Office and some 20 of a regular staff in the Rink, one can readily estimate what percentage this is of a Dublin staff of 2,428 all told. Dublin, Cork, Limerick, Waterford, and Galway alone comprise more than 50 per cent. of the staff in the 26 counties area. With nobody at work in these centres save three in Galway, we arrive at the conclusion that less than one per cent. of regular staff are working. Allowing for a few temporary hands at work here and there, for postmasters and sub-postmasters who are 'at work,' but doing nothing, there is not, all heads counted, 3 per cent. of a normal staff on duty in the 26 counties area.

"It is announced that at Cork the town sub-offices are transacting business as usual, and all members of the supervising staff at the head office are on duty. These town sub-offices have remained open all the time, but, as in the case of Dublin, all they do is sell stamps. Any other work, if transacted in these offices or other offices throughout the country, goes no further.

"Discussing the wages 'cut,' the statement says:—'If there is any man in Ireland who will tell us how we can live on £1 16s. a week less this month than we did in August, 1921, we will go back to work to-morrow.'

THE PUBLIC POINT OF VIEW.

"A special representative of the Postal Unions was deputed to-day (Wednesday) to ascertain from city merchants and traders the effect of the postal strike on their business. He met at first with hostility from the representatives of some firms who appeared to attribute the entire blame for the dislocation to the workers. In such cases, however, a statement from the Union appeared to convince them that there were two sides to the question. The firms visited numbered 28, and comprised drapery, provisions, hardware, and various other merchants; insurance offices and solicitors, one laundry, seedsmen, auctioneers, and, generally speaking, that class of firm which receives and despatches a considerable amount of correspondence through the post.

"Two firms declined to give any information, but all the others stated that their business was practically paralysed. Our representative having referred to the official statements in the Press that letters and telegrams were being delivered without delay, the invariable reply was 'We get hardly any correspondence, and the little we do get is days old.' An important wholesale draper's agent referred to the fact that a few prominent firms appeared to get preferential treatment."

SEIZURE OF LETTERS.

A business firm in Dublin writes to us as follows under yesterday's date:—

"Is it not time that the Government took more effective precautions for the protection of citizens co-operating in the present much-advertised scheme of delivery of mails?

"Our messenger to the Rink Post Office to-day was, for the first time, handed a batch of about 20 letters, including two from our head office, containing wages cheques, etc. After leaving the Rink he was held up by six or seven men, assaulted, searched, and all the letters taken from him. He was also threatened with 'plugging' if he again called for letters. It will be interesting to know if the strikers' leaders approve of these methods."

A telegraph messenger was stopped last evening by a man at Crosthwaite Park, Kingstown, who searched him, and took sixteen telegrams out of his pocket.

TELEPHONE WIRES CUT.

Late on Tuesday night, or early yesterday morning, 58 telephone wires were cut in Lansdowne road, Dublin.

"Full time" begins at Woolwich Arsenal next Monday.

THE CENSORSHIP

STILL IN EXISTENCE.

BUT AT VANISHING POINT.

LABOUR'S QUESTION ANSWERED.

During question time in the Provisional Parliament's meeting yesterday afternoon Mr. O'Shannon (Labour) again raised the matter of the Press censorship. He asked the Minister for Defence whether his attention had been called to the following statements in an editorial in the Irish Times of September 21st, viz.:—

(1) "It appears, however, that a sort of censorship, which we know not whether to describe as military or civil, still exists.

(2) "The newspapers have been ordered on several occasions during the past fortnight to omit passages from reports which their staffs had prepared in the ordinary way.

(3) "One of these reports concerned the alleged treatment of Republican prisoners.

(4) "Another contained the evidence and verdict at an inquest in Dublin."

Mr. O'Shannon wished to know whether there was any truth in the allegations marked (1), (2), (3), (4); if so, by whom, with what authority, and for what purpose were these orders given; and what, in fact, were the statements suppressed.

General Mulcahy said that the censorship of the Press had not been removed. It had been relaxed virtually to vanishing point. The various newspaper proprietors had been given to understand that at the present time, when the propagandists and distortionists were busy, material would come their way the publication of which was not compatible with general public safety, and they had been instructed that, while general "proofs" need not be submitted to the Censor, matter about which they had any doubts should be submitted to him.

Usually if it came to notice through any one source that material was being circulated for publication that it was in the public interest to prohibit, a general instruction with regard to this matter was issued to all newspapers.

Five such instances had occurred during the past fortnight. The matter referred to in point No. 3 consisted of untrue and inflammatory statements made at a meeting of the Dublin Corporation regarding the treatment of prisoners.

The matter referred to in paragraph 4 was statements made at the inquest on Patrick Mannion, who was killed in Dublin on September 17.

Generally, the censorship was imposed by Government authority on the advice of the Minister of Defence.

Mr. O'Shannon inquired whether the Minister was quite clear that all the newspapers had got intimation from the Ministry to which he referred. He was quite sure that they had not.

General Mulcahy said that inquiries would be made into the matter, but no newspaper had been advised that the censorship had been removed.

Mr. O'Shannon asked was the position that a kind of semi-censorship was in existence. When it was fully in existence the newspapers knew exactly where they stood. Now the Minister said that the censorship had not been abolished, but relaxed to vanishing point.

The Irish Times pointed out that that vanishing point was not so vanishing as he would make it. He called attention to a footnote to a letter in that paper, to the effect that the military summarised one of these reports concerning an inquest.

General Mulcahy pointed out that for the newspaper offices to submit reports in particular cases to the Censor for him to see before publication was evidence that the proprietors understood the situation. The actual cases of such censorship during the past fortnight had been five.

SEPARATION ALLOWANCES.

Among other questions was one by Mr. Alfred Byrne, who asked the Minister for Defence if he would take immediate steps to "speed up" payments of separation allowances to dependents of members of the national Army.

The Minister replied that everything possible was being done to see that there would be no cases of dependents' allowances left unattended to or delayed. If there were any cases that came to the particular notice of Deputies, and if it were a case on which they wished to test the whole system, they could supply him with as complete particulars as possible and he would furnish them with a full report. He would be glad if general complaints were sent to the Chief Paymaster at Portobello, but any particular case which a Deputy wished to bring to his notice should be addressed to himself.

COMPENSATION CLAIMS.

Mr. A. Byrne asked the President if he would take steps to ensure an immediate investigation into the claims of citizens whose property was destroyed in the recent troubles; would he state what procedure the Government proposed to take to deal with the claims, and when the tribunal was likely to hold its first sitting; and if he would state whether he would consider the advisability of advancing small sums to traders who desired to re-start their business in temporary premises.

The Minister for Home Affairs said that the President hoped to make a further general statement on the subject at an early date. The question of making advances on claims was under consideration.

TRANSFERRED OFFICIALS.

Mr. Gavan Duffy asked the Minister for Home Affairs to furnish a statement showing the names, offices, and salaries (payable by the Irish Government) of the officers transferred from the British Government and lent by the British Government respectively within the meaning of Article 75 of the Draft Constitution.

Mr. O'Higgins said that the present position in regard to the transfer of staff was that the staffs of all Irish departments, with the exception of the Inland Revenue, Customs, and Excise, Land Commission, Registry of Deeds, Quit Rents Office, and the Office of the Clerk of the Crown and Hanaper, had been transferred to the Irish Government.

In the cases of Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise, taxation services were being administered temporarily by British departments as agents for the Irish Government, and under the agency agreement the transfer of the staff would not take place until the agency terminated.

In the case of the Land Commission Department, it was agreed between the British and the Irish Governments that the transfer should be deferred for the present.

Ultimately the staffs of all departments would be transferred under Clause 75 of the Constitution.

The statement for which the deputy asked would involve the preparation of a list giving names, ranks, and salaries of every civil servant, including every postal official, throughout the country, and he could not see what useful purpose would justify the time and labour involved in making out such a list.

With regard to the officers lent by the British Government, he was not in a position to say what officers would be on loan when the Constitution came into force.

Mr. Gavan Duffy pointed out that he referred to officers transferred from London.

Mr. O'Higgins said that the question should have been put in that form.

Mr. Duffy said that he would raise the matter again.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT.

Mr. Johnson (Labour) asked the Minister for Finance whether his attention had been drawn to the report signed by Mr. P. J. MacAndrew, Consulting Engineer, Dublin, "on the result of his negotiations with financial groups for the development of Irish industries, to the Ministers of the Irish Free State," and whether Mr. P. J. MacAndrew had any authority from the Ministers "to negotiate with leading financial firms of London, Canada, and America with a view to securing their financial support for the development of our country's resources"; and, if not, whether the Minister for Finance intended to take any action in the matter.

Mr. O'Higgins, answering for the Minister of Finance, said that he had no knowledge of the report referred to. No authority had been given to Mr. MacAndrew to conduct such negotiations. The establishment of order was an essential preliminary to any development of the country's resources, and every effort was being made in that direction. As soon as order was established, the Government would consider favourably any further form of State action by which development was likely to be assisted.

CLONMEL'S LOSSES.

Mr. Butler (Labour) asked the Minister for Industry and Commerce whether his attention had been called to the exceptional hardships suffered by several firms in the motor building and engineering trade in Clonmel during the last two years, in consequence of (1) losses during the "Black and Tan" régime, and (2) of the seizure of property during the occupation of the town by irregular forces during the past few months, and (3) the interference with transit through destruction of roads; and whether, as a consequence of these cumulative losses, there was grave danger of a considerable industry being permanently lost to the town, and whether such loss could be prevented by prompt financial assistance; and, further, whether the Government had given consideration to these cases, and, if so, what decision had been reached.

Mr. McGrath, Minister for Industry and Commerce, stated that these trades had suffered severely in Clonmel, and the Government had considered representations made. Urgent representations had been made to the British Government in respect of the loss incurred before the truce. In respect of the losses incurred owing to the recent irregular activities, the Government had considered the possibility of giving priority for the settlement of claims, but until claims had been definitely proved they were not prepared to make advances on account.

FROM TO-DAY'S LONDON PAPERS.

THE GREAT REVOLT.

A CLOUDY HORIZON.

"THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY SAYS:—

Few people in this country will regret the downfall of the German ex-Emperor's brother-in-law, King Constantine, of Greece. The defeat of the Greek Army made it inevitable, and the only surprise has been that it did not immediately follow the evacuation of Smyrna. It appears to have been imposed upon him at the dictation of the soldiers to whom he had promised victory, and whom he sent to defeat. His conduct during the great war showed his character so plainly that he should not have received the smallest countenance from this country, or rather from its Government, after his second accession in 1920.

A paltry personage vanishes from the Near Eastern stage; but the piece has still to be played out, and it is to be feared that his disappearance will not simplify or better the conditions in which it stands, adds The Times.

The Cabinet sat until a late hour yesterday evening in the expectation of an answer from Kemal. The Prime Minister had come up to London expressly to consider it. It did not come. There are, however, rumours that it is on the way, and the Cabinet is to meet again at 11 this morning. It must be hoped that it will differ from the answer which, according to a Reuter message from Constantinople, he has sent to Sir Charles Harington.

The fruits of the past policy of the Government are ripening before their eyes and before the eyes of the country with terrible rapidity. Strongly as the country is opposed to fresh hostilities, and just as is its resentment at the blunders which have brought it to the verge of them, we believe that it will steadily support a policy of firmness that is free from provocation. It will support such a policy because its political instinct, based on long experience, makes it see that any other choice might be fatal to the credit on which all our greatness rests.

"PAT" IN TANGANYIKA.

"TIM DOOLAN" UP TO DATE.

The Times Nairobi Correspondent writes:—An isolated Sinn Feiner has strayed from the fold and found his way to Africa. When Mr. A. C. Hollis, Acting Governor of Tanganyika territory, was touring the part of his territory adjacent to Kilimanjaro, one of the features of the welcome by the township of Moschi was a congregation of thousands of Masai warriors, who carried on a continuous dance for five days and nights. Leading the extraordinary concourse was an individual garbed like a traditional Irishman. He had breeches, a tight-fitting blue swallow-tailed coat, with brass buttons, and a shillelagh, complete. They are heirlooms of his family, and he cannot tell their history. Second in command was a warrior sporting a cocked hat of the pre-Turpin era.

The story is curiously reminiscent of Rudyard Kipling's tale, "Namgay Doola" in "Life's Handicap," The Times points out in a footnote. Namgay was a red-headed rebel who refused to pay taxes to the Himalayan Kingdom of which he was a subject. His barbaric version of "The wearin' of the green" and his zeal to serve as a fighting man help to disclose the fact that his father, Thimla Dhula, was originally Tim Doolan.

ARBITRATION IN AUSTRALIA.

CAUSE OF THE FAILURE.

The elaborate structure of the Industrial Arbitration Court built by the people of Australia upon a foundation of splendid ideals and erected with an infinite amount of care, has begun to sway perilously, remarks The Times. It bent before the successive storms of Labour unrest which gathered and broke during the latter years of the war; it has suffered fierce and continuous bombardment from its assailants in the political and industrial communities of the Commonwealth.

Where, then, has the system failed? asks The Times. Perhaps its main defect has lain in a lack of understanding of human nature in general—and the nature of the worker in particular—on the part both of those who designed and of those who administered the Act. For the solution of the problem Australia is gradually being forced to rely, not on the artificial laws of compulsory arbitration, but on voluntary contracts between masters and men, based on the natural laws of supply and demand.

MARK'S DOWNWARD PLUNGE.

EFFECTS OF INFLATION.

There was a sudden fall in the Exchange to-day. After a period of comparative stability in the neighbourhood of 1,400, the dollar rate suddenly went to 1,650, and closed in the region of 1,635. Most of the circumstances brought forward to account for it have been in operation for the past ten days, and the fall can only be described as a further stage on the path of inflation, says the Berlin Correspondent of The Times, in a message yesterday.

The Reichsbank proudly announces that it is turning out paper marks at the rate of only seven thousand million a day, and the floating debt was increased by thirty thousand million since September 1. All the concomitant facts of inflation are again strongly in evidence. Wholesale iron prices have been raised, and have once more played havoc with contracts. Miners' unions are demanding greatly increased wages (in spite of the fact that a new rate has only just come in) and the owners' "combine" is faced with the alternative of industrial disturbance or increased coal prices. It will probably choose to meet the cost, with the result of a further all round rise in commodities.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

INCIPIENT STRENGTH.

The tone of the Stock markets yesterday was quite steady, incipient strength being shown in several directions; but complaints about scarcity of business were general, states The Times. British Government Securities enjoyed a moderate improvement under the lead of the 5 p.c. War Loan. There was a continuance of the demand for Argentine Rails, the market for which was affected by a scarcity of stock. Rubber shares were quoted higher nearly all round, following the further rise in the price of the raw rubber. Oil shares remained out of favour, and a slight set-back occurred in the principal Mining shares.

LEGAL ADMINISTRATION.

PROPOSAL TO ABOLISH PARISH COURTS.

The following resolution will be moved by the Minister for Home Affairs at to-day's meeting of the Provisional Parliament:—

"That in the opinion of this Dail the Government should wherever the military situation so premits, take immediate steps for the consolidation and re-establishment of Civil Administration, and should to that end rescind the decree establishing District and Parish Courts in so far as it has not already been rescinded."

CONSTANTINE ABDICATES.

POLITICAL UPHEAVAL IN GREECE.

NAVY AND ARMY MUTINY.

RESIGNATION OF THE GOVERNMENT.

King Constantine of Greece has abdicated, following a political revolt of the Navy and Army and the resignation of his Government. The revolutionaries demand the establishment of a "People's Government" and the prosecution of the war against Turkey. There have been no disorders.

A Constantinople telegram says that Kemal Pasha has sent an evasive reply to Sir Charles Harington's Note demanding the immediate retirement of the Turkish columns which have invaded the Chanak neutral zone. Kemal says that he is unaware of the existence of a neutral zone.

Participation in the proposed peace conference is demanded by Russia on behalf of herself, Georgia and Ukraine. The Note says that Russia will take no heed of any arrangement for the future control of the Straits made by an international conference at which she is not represented.

Ministers were in council for some hours yesterday. The general situation in the Near East is described as very obscure.

POLITICAL REVOLUTION.

THE MARCH OF EVENTS.

The Government has been officially informed that King Constantine of Greece has abdicated. The Greek Cabinet has resigned.

Confirmation has also been received in official quarters in London of telegrams announcing a revolutionary outbreak in Greece.

It would seem that the revolution broke out in the Islands of Chios and Mytilene, in the Ægean Sea. A large number of soldiers and refugees took refuge in the islands after the sack of Smyrna.

Another revolution has commenced at Salonika, where there has been much talk of fighting for the retention of Thrace.

In Athens all was quiet last night. Martial law has been proclaimed.

The following messages have been received from Reuter's Correspondent:—

ATHENS, Tuesday Morning.

An insurrectionary movement has broken out among the troops and sailors at Mytilene and Chios, and has spread to Salonika. The City of Athens remains quiet up to the present. At Chios the control of the movement had been assumed by General Platsiras. The Fleet appears to be siding against the Government.

(Later.)

The internal situation is developing rapidly, and affairs are plainly heading towards a crisis. The King to-night proclaimed martial law. Eight thousand troops, with their officers, have revolted at Salonika, and have sent word to Athens insisting upon the imprisonment of the former Premiers, MM. Gounaris and Stratos, whom they hold responsible for the adverse campaign in Asia Minor, and also upon a change of Government and the establishment of a new neutral Cabinet.

Important contingents of the Army in the Islands of Mytilene, Chios, and Crete have revolted, and have sent an aeroplane over Athens which released pamphlets demanding the abdication of the King, the removal of the Ministry, and the active continuance of the war in Thrace.

A section of the Army in Thrace has sent a Commission to Athens to urge that the King should join the Army there.

All the revolts are reported to be entirely political. No fighting of an insurrectionary character is reported in any of the disturbed areas. The anti-Venizelists allege that the revolt in the islands was engineered by partisans of M. Venizelos.

An interesting feature of the throwing of proclamations from an aeroplane from Mytilene demanding the abdication of the King is that the signatory, Colonel Gonatas, is not a Venizelist. Proclamations have also been thrown on Larissa and Salonica.

The Prime Minister, M. Triandafilakos, has seen the King, and His Majesty has expressed his desire to be among his troops in Thrace. There will be a Crown Council to-night. Communications with Mytilene are interrupted.

The Government has received the news of the revolution with its usual sangfroid, feigned or genuine. The Minister of the Interior told journalists that it is the Government's impression that the movement has the character of peaceful demands of a section of the Army and Navy. He added that the Government does not know how many warships have joined the movement.

The King appears to be undisturbed regarding these happenings. Nevertheless, measures have been taken to maintain order, and the town is strongly patrolled.

The Government has had extreme difficulty in getting into wireless communication with the Fleet at Mytilene, where one battleship and several destroyers are stationed.

GOVERNMENT RESIGNS.

9 p.m.

The Government has resigned. Very important changes are impending. There are indications of a peaceful solution of the crisis. It is doubtful whether General Metaxas will accept the Premiership.

The battleship Kilkis and the cruiser Lemnos, as well as nine torpedo destroyers and seaplanes at Mytilene, have declared themselves on the side of the revolution. It is reported that a body of revolutionary troops has landed at Cape Sunion, and General Papoulas has been sent to meet them to try and stop their advance by negotiating with their leaders. Great excitement prevails in Athens, where wild reports are current. It is announced that troops have been disembarked at various points in Athens. Martial law is in force.

REVOLUTIONARIES' DEMANDS.

(Later.)

King Constantinople has accepted the resignation of the Cabinet. His Majesty said that he entirely put aside any idea of resistance which might arise as the result of a civil war in Greece.

There quickly followed the reception of two ultimatums from the cruiser Lemnos, which arrived at Laurium (ten miles to the east of Athens), with a number of troops in revolt on board. The first of these ultimatums demanded the dissolution of the National Assembly and the formation of a People's Cabinet. The second ultimatum declared that it considered the National Assembly already dissolved, and demanded the creation of a Pro-Entente Cabinet, whose members would be appointed by the revolutionaries.

If no favourable reply was received by midnight, it was added, disembarkation would be begun.

General Papoulas, who was recently appointed Military Governor of Thrace, has proceeded to Lauriun to negotiate with the revolutionaries.

Neither ultimatum spoke of the abdication of the King, which was mentioned only in yesterday's aeroplane manifesto. The Crown Prince has abandoned his proposed journey to Rumania for the Royal marriage.

Wednesday Afternoon.

King Constantine has abdicated.

SALONIKA TROOPS JOIN.

A telegram from Salonika says that the troops of the garrison have joined the revolution. The Independent deputies, MM. Dragoumis and Nicolaider, sided with the soldiers. The military movement is being directed both by Venizelist and Royalist officers, and, therefore, is not of a party character.

Prince Paul, fourth son of the ex-King Constantine, is reported to be a prisoner on board the training ship Elli.

FRENCH ATTITUDE.

PARIS, Wednesday.

The following semi-official statement is issued here:—The news of King Constantine's abdication caused no surprise in French political circles. The Greek insurrection will cause no change in the policy solemnly undertaken by the three great Powers in regard to Turkey, but Turkey must not prejudice her position by taking military measures on the European shore of the Straits. Such a tactical error might have serious effect on the negotiations at present in progress.

KEMAL'S IGNORANCE.

UNAWARE OF NEUTRAL ZONE.

The Turkish troops which penetrated into the Chanak neutral zone are still there, so far as the latest news received in London last night indicates. There had been no friction. Nothing was known in official circles of a reply from Kemal to Sir Charles Harington's Note ordering him to withdraw his forces; but a telegram from Reuter's Constantinople Correspondent, dated yesterday, says:—

The tension in regard to the violation of the neutral zone was somewhat relaxed by a reply received this morning from Mustapha Kemal in Smyrna, addressed to General Sir Charles Harington. It characteristically evades the question of withdrawal, and declares that Mustapha Kemal has no knowledge of a neutral zone.

It complains of the action of the British in destroying buildings and roads, and concurs with the desire of the Allies to avoid incidents.

BRITAIN'S DUPLICITY.

In an interview on Monday with a representative of the Chicago Tribune (Paris edition), Mustapha Kemal said:—"The real reason of the British Government for refusing us the free passage of the Dardanelles is to protect the Greeks. Therefore, we do not consider it just or reasonable that other Powers should share this point of view.

"The present policy of the British Government has two objects—namely, to save the remnants of the Greek Army and to retain possession of Constantinople and the Dardanelles. It hopes, even if it relinquishes Constantinople, to maintain itself at Gallipoli, which would permit it indirectly to control Constantinople.

"The British Cabinet, at this moment, is intriguing in every way, in order to dupe the other Powers. The desire is to drag them into an adventure."

"THE NEUTRAL ZONE."

Ferid Bey, the Kemalist representative in Paris, stated to a representative of the Figaro that he knew nothing whatever of the Chanak incident, and pointed out that, so far as the Kemalists are concerned, there is no neutral zone. To formulate a demand, he said, was not to create a fact.

However, if the Kemalist Government accepted this delimitation, one could be sure that it would respect it.

With regard to the clauses of the proposed armistice, Ferid Bey stated that Turkey would demand the evacuation of Thrace and the handing over of the country to Ottoman administration; Constantinople would also have to be handed over.

He said that the Greeks were preparing the systematic destruction of Thrace; they were taking away eminent Turks as hostages. Furthermore, the Allies could themselves begin the immediate evacuation of these districts.

Ferid Bey concluded by dwelling on Turkey's desire for peace and her determination to advocate her rights with all possible wisdom.

FUTURE OF THE STRAITS.

RUSSIA DEMANDS A HEARING.

A Note has been received by the Foreign Office from Russia, signed by M. Karakhan, Acting Commisar for Foreign Affairs, asking that that country, Georgia, and Ukraine, should participate in the pending Conference on the Near Eastern question, on account of the great interests which those countries have in the Straits.

Russia renews her declaration that she will recognise no decision about the Straits in which she has not participated and which ignores her interests. She considers that the isolated efforts of certain countries to settle the Near Eastern crisis without reference to all the people interested can only result in the danger of another war.

Russia, by virtue of her special position in the East, and in the interests of the people who desire a peaceful solution, proposes a Conference of all the countries concerned, and especially the Black Sea States.

CABINET CONFERENCE.

"SITUATION VERY OBSCURE."

Mr. Churchill yesterday afternoon again presided over a conference at which there were present the Secretary for War and the Chiefs of the Navy, Army, and Air Force. They met at the Colonial Office to continue their deliberations with regard to the furnishing of the necessary supplies to the British forces.

Mr. Lloyd George returned to town shortly after 6 o'clock in the evening, and called together some of his colleagues of the Ministry. It was not, strictly, a Cabinet Council, but a conference of Ministers forming a section of the Cabinet. They met at 7 o'clock, the purpose of the conference being to discuss the Eastern situation, with especial reference to the Russian Note demanding admission to the Peace Conference and the situation created by the abdication of King Constantine.

The Ministers sat till about 9 o'clock, and it was subsequently learned authoritatively that although Kemal's reply to the Allies' joint Note was expected this evening, it had not arrived, nor was the Government aware of any reply concerning the occupation of the neutral zone.

The Reuter cablegram from Constantinople to the effect that Kemal had sent an answer to Sir Charles Harington, in which he evaded the question of the withdrawal, and declared that he had no knowledge of a neutral zone, had been brought to the knowledge of the Cabinet, but no official information had been received in confirmation.

The situation was declared to be very obscure. The Turkish troops were still occupying the neutral zone, and it was not a fact that a definite time limit for withdrawal had been fixed.

SMYRNA REFUGEES.

Apart from the expectation of a reply to the invitation to a peace conference, the Ministers appear to have been concerned chiefly with matters relating to the removal of refugees from Smyrna. The information in the hands of the Government is that 200,000 refugees are awaiting removal, and the Turks have declared that those not taken off by the 30th will be sent into the interior.

The taking off of so large a number by next Saturday is a physical impossibility, and every endeavour is being made by the Allied representatives on the spot to secure an extension of the time.

Males between 20 and 45 years of age will not be allowed to leave, and as to any sent into the interior, the gravest apprehensions are entertained.

The Government has chartered some fifteen ships, but that number is totally inadequate to carry out the removal in the stipulated time. There are obvious difficulties, in addition, about destination and feeding, and the Cabinet had before it yesterday evening a report on those subjects from the committee over which Mr. Churchill has been presiding.

Grateful recognition is made of the efforts of various American organisations to assist the unfortunate refugees, many of whom are virtually starving.

It is understood that the Ministers, in addition, discussed measures which it would be necessary to take in the event of certain situations arising. As the general situation is obscure, and these particular situations are, for the moment, purely hypothetical, no information as to the nature of these means is available, nor can any indication be given of the means proposed to meet various contingencies. All that can be said about the Government attitude is that an earnest endeavour is being made to prepare for any development which appears to be at all probable.

A meeting of the Cabinet is to be held at 10 Downing street at 11 o'clock this morning, and the Prime Minister is remaining in town. It is suggested that Ministerial gatherings are likely to be somewhat frequent and at short notice while the situation remains as doubtful as it is at the present.

With regard to the abdication of King Constantine, the latest information received by the Government seems to indicate that he will be succeeded by his son.

MILITARY COURTS DEBATE.

lawyers had proved themselves unreliable from his point of view. He (Mr. Johnson) wanted to know what code was going to govern these courts.

They were not only authorising the army to punish with death any offender against the regulations or orders issued by the army, but they were authorising the army to transport any citizen of this country for an indefinite period. Was that the power that they were willing to hand over to the Minister of Defence or to his subordinates, most of whom had not one-tenth of the appreciation of the responsibility of their position that he had? He claimed that before they proceeded any further with that discussion they should have a full and candid exposition of the military situation from the Minister of Defence.

Mr. S. Milroy spoke in support of the President's motion, and said that, were these normal times, and were they in the condition of a country that had secured the full stability of constitutional authority, Deputy Johnson's speech would have found an echo of sympathy in the mind of every right-thinking democrat.

He assumed that the objective of that Assembly and the objective of the proposal was the safety and welfare of the citizens of this State. Deputy Johnson from the beginning to the end of his speech ignored—so far as he (the speaker) could interpret his statement—that the purpose of these proposals was the safeguarding of the welfare of all the citizens in the Irish State.

LIVES IN PERIL.

In the whole of Deputy Johnson's speech there was not the slightest allusion to, or reflection of, the fact that the lives and security of every man, woman, and child in the country was in real peril. Deputy Johnson had not made a single allusion to that. He had given not the slightest indication of the actual conditions in Ireland to-day, which everyone with a sense of responsibility must take into consideration in dealing with the proposal before the House.

It was not fair of Deputy Johnson so to detach himself from realities, and existing conditions did not warrant such a speech as he had made. The facts that confronted the Irish people were that those who were defying the constituted authority of the nation, and who were endeavouring to overthrow that authority, were engaging in enforcing a sentence of capital punishment on the economic life of the nation. That was an absolute and hard fact, and no figure of rhetoric, and they must support any efforts on the part of the Government to prevent that fell design from being carried out.

He had every hope and every confidence that if possible miscarriages of justice occurred—it would defy the ingenuity of the wit of man to prevent them in every case—they would be reduced to a minimum by those in control of the military forces.

The purpose of those proposals was to restore order, and enable the people of this country to live lives of civilised beings without their being jeopardised every moment by the terrible idealist gun-holding bully.

TRIBUTE TO ARMY.

The armed soldier was not necessarily a symbol of militarism. He thought that it was about time that that House paid some tribute to the Army, which had averted from Ireland the great and terrible calamity of the return of the British Army of Occupation. The material out of which Ireland's present Army had been constituted had brought splendour and credit to this nation. They had saved Ireland from the loss of her new-born liberties, and had averted the great disaster of the return of the Army of Occupation.

To secure that how many of them had paid with their blood and their lives the price of the nation's liberty! That Dail had been meeting in security as the result of their sacrifices and valour. The Army had a great and overwhelming task to perform, and had performed it well and valiantly. He thought that if any message went from that House it should be that they recognised the merits of these soldiers, and that the Irish National Assembly was not going to let Ireland's national Army down. (Applause.)

Mr. O'Shannon (Labour), in opposing the motion, declared that they did not stand for ambushing, murdering, or arson, but they did question the method of legalising such measures as were now proposed, and they challenged the legal gentlemen to justify it from a legal and constitutional point of view. They had great admiration for most of the men and officers of the national Army, and there were very few members of the assembly for whom they had greater respect than the Minister of Defence, yet with all their good qualities the composition and origin of the national Army were pretty much the same as in the case of the irregular Army. The old I.R.A. was trained to fight in a particular guerrilla way. That kind of Army required certain definite qualities which did not go to make a good soldier in a regular established army. Such soldiers were not fit to be the judges in courts over the lives of thousands of people in the country.

ALLEGED BRANDING.

To his eternal shame he looked on a man who was for two hours a prisoner of the national Army in Drogheda, and whose arms were branded with two letters. He would never vote that the power of life and death should be put into the hands of officers who were supposed to control soldiers who did such an act. He knew a Transport Union organiser who alleged that he was beaten and kicked by a Brigadier-General of the national troops. In another case there was an allegation that a man was an enemy because he was not of their faith, and he was taken from his hotel at 4 a.m. to Portobello Barracks. Such officers were not fitted to be trusted with that grave and great charge.

He appealed to the Ministry to leave aside the big stick of the Treaty in this matter, and permit their followers to vote freely and honestly upon it. He wanted the Ministry to tell them where they were going to deport their prisoners—surely not in hulks outside Dunleary, surely not to Great Britain or Belfast or the United States? The Ministry should take care that some of those into whose hands these powers were given did not send these prisoners further than the United States. He also wanted the Ministry to tell them what measures they were going to take to find out who shot Neville and the others. These men may have been irregulars, but they should have got an opportunity of trial.

In his view both Armies seemed to have such swelled heads that the only authority they recognised was the authority of the gun. By handing over all authority to the Army the Ministry was overthrowing Parliament. If a free vote were taken he believed that not six of the supporters of the Government would vote for these measures. He doubted very much whether at present there was power within that Dail to order or approve an execution. If such executions took place the ranks of the irregulars and the body of opinion behind them would swell.

So strongly did he feel against this regulation and the whole system of shaking the big stick in that House he thought that the time was coming when if he had any little influence with his colleagues he would use it for the purpose of putting an end to the sham that was being carried on there, and give them plenty of opportunity without criticism or opposition to pass as many regulations as they pleased. If it came to that other things would come behind it too. (Applause.)

NO BLOOD LUST.

Mr. Blythe declared that the entire speech of Mr. O'Shannon was in the air, and was all in the way of wilful exaggeration, misunderstanding, and misinterpretation. It was the sort of speech which they heard very frequently last January and February. It was the duty of the Government to make proposals to the House on matters of policy, and if it did not do so it would fail in its duty. There was no suggestion to hand over all power to the Army, which was given certain power to do certain work. The power of life and death was given to it when it was directed to proceed against the irregulars. The officers that would preside in the courts were directing the taking of life every day for the purpose of asserting the authority of the Government.

If there were any blood lust in the Army officers would not be accepting the surrender of men using dum-dum bullets. Every sort of provocation had been borne by the Army without shooting, and it would carry out these regulations with every desire to save life and avoid bloodshed. The suggestion that this thing would cause dark deeds to be done was ludicrous. If anything would cause such dark deeds it would be the failure of the Government to provide for meting out punishment to those who killed and murdered soldiers of the national Army. As to the deportation of prisoners they were negotiating for an island with a suitable climate.

Mr. Johnson—In the Congo?

Mr. Blythe—No. It would be necessary to put the prisoners where it would be apparent to them that they were not going to get out any day they liked, and that they were not looked upon as people who did no wrong. As to Mr. O'Shannon's statement that if deputies were given a free vote only six would be found in support of the regulations he believed that the reverse was true, and that six would not be found in opposition if there were a ballot.

A Labour Deputy—Let us have a ballot then.

Mr. O'Shannon declared that everybody on his side of the House was quite free to vote as he liked.

Mr. Murphy (Drogheda) gave an emphatic denial to the allegations made by Mr. O'Shannon as to an incident at Drogheda. The national forces at Drogheda were absolutely certain that the story was part of the usual diabolical propaganda throughout the country.

Mr O'Shannon said that he quite agreed that those in charge of the national Army in Drogheda would not tolerate anything of the kind he had referred to, but he himself had seen the man that day who showed him the brand.

MINISTER OF DEFENCE.

General Richard Mulcahy said that they had in the first place to consider the status of the Army and its relations with the Government, and he wished to make it clear that it was the Army of the Government, set up by the Government and financed by the Government, and which could be cleared away by the Government at such a time as it decided to clear it way or to adopt some other machinery.

The Army was asked on a certain date to take military action against forces working for the downfall of the Government and the destruction of the country. The Army had taken that action, and so far as the danger that was uppermost in the minds of the people at the time was concerned—the danger that security would be destroyed and that the country would lose the freedom that had been secured under the Treaty—so far as that fear was concerned, the Army, by the exertions it had made, had cleared the country of that fear.

He had been through a portion of the country from Dublin to Limerick, and to Boyle and back to Dublin, and, so far as the main centre of the country was concerned, there was no work in it that an Army as such should be called upon to do. And he believed that in that portion of the country lying east of that triangle there was no work that an ordinary army of a country should be called upon to do.

The work of dealing with the disorders and the irregularities in the country was being dealt with by the Army because the Government had no other machinery to do it. They were now asking that certain powers should be given to them—such powers as no ordinary army in the field, dealing with conditions in which there was no civil administration, might have—powers that, from the necessity of their condition, they must have. They were asking for these powers that certain steps might be taken against people who committed murder, burned down property, and were aiming at the life of the country.

They were simply an army standing in the gap, as they had stood in many a gap before, and they were going to remain in the gap until such time as the Government could set up a different type of machinery.

MILITARY POSITION.

The position generally in the country was that, so far as the military problem was concerned, it was confined to a limited number of somewhat out-of-the-way districts. The big problem that lay before the country and the Army was to deal with the opening up of those arteries that it was necessary to open up, if the country was not to be choked.

They had railway communication from Dublin to Waterford and to Mallow, and communication with Limerick would be restored in a few days; but between these points was practically without transport. There were no railways because these forces had smashed up the railways. Practically the whole South of Ireland was without means of transport and communication, so necessary for business and for the natural life of the country and the people.

At no point did the Army act in an offensive spirit. The Army went out to protect their towns from the incursion of looting bands; to protect railways and roads from being smashed up by people who sought to bring disaster and destruction on the country in order that they might bring the English back.

The army was still confining itself to the work of protection and semi-construction, and, with their small resources, keeping going the life of the country. They were setting themselves now definitely to opening up the whole railway system in the South. These were the military operations that the army was engaged on. That was the militarism that was in the minds of the army.

ROVING BANDS.

In parts of the country they had small bands going round from one place to another that an army as such could not very definitely deal with. A week or so ago he visited an area on the Roscrea-Limerick line to see what could be done. Passing by one of the posts on Sunday evening, he found that seventeen men going to Mass that morning had been caught in a small mountain country and absolutely mown down. Nine of them were wounded, and afterwards he visited three of them lying dead in Nenagh. What would any deputy, putting himself in the position of Commander-in-Chief, say to himself when he stood before these men; what was he going to say was going to be done?

Were the men to be told that they should simply fight with every group of irregulars that attacked them, or were they going to adopt a more intelligent way? They had put upon the army the responsibility of protecting the lives of the people and the life of the country; they had told them that in order to do that they should take life if necessary, and it was the responsibility of the Government to say that life must be taken. Were they going to stand before these men and say that life must only be taken by their going out and exposing their own lives?

Were they going to say that they would only be asked to do and bear responsibility for that particular type of killing that might be necessary to round up those people who were trying to destroy the country?

HARD FACTS.

He asked deputies to put themselves before those men who had a prisoner who was in charge of an operation against the soldiers. Were they going to explain to the men that they were going to send that man to Gormanston and leave him there until this thing was all over? Were they going to leave it for the second or third in command to have a free hand to continue the same work?

It was a necessity that those people in the country who were committing murder, arson, and looting, and were destroying the life of the country, should know that they shall forfeit their lives if they continued to do that work, and the Government must set up the machinery for taking that forfeiture.

The Army was acting as that portion of the machinery, so far as engaging those forces who were going around the country and capturing them, and it was prepared to do the work of executing those people whom it was necessary to execute until such time as the Government set up the machinery which it ought to have, but, which under the circumstances it had not yet had.

The Army would stay in the gap until the Government was on its feet, and it would do any type of work it was necessary to do for the Government to get on its feet. The Army was the servant of the Government.

The point had been raised that they could not do those things because they had not years of tradition in their blood. Unfortunately, they had to deal with the situation as it existed, and it was simply futile to think that they should drop their hands by their sides and let other people take an advantage because they had not years of tradition in their blood or the big machinery that a well-established country would have. Deputies had asked for a report of the whole military situation. With the exception of the sniper and the man who went out with a bomb, the life of the country over a very great portion was normal.

They had the country looking to this Government and a section of the people looking to a political party in opposition to the Government, headed by leaders who had given very great service to the country in a time of very great distress—a section who as yet had not had their confidence broken in those leaders. The dangers they had run economically were not as great as the dangers they had run politically. When they found responsible Deputies standing up in that House and saying that if the Government passes this or that legislation that they do not agree with they will leave the House, and goodness knows what will come after that—when they had responsible Deputies implying all this, it was time they should see clearly where they were from the point of view of political thought in this country.

Mr. O'Shannon (interrupting) said that he had held that the House was a machine for registering the opinions of the Deputies and not a deliberative assembly.

IRREGULAR LEADERS.

General Mulcahy, continuing, proceeded to refer to the irregular opposition to the Government and to the leaders of that opposition.

He had there some notes. The first was from Liam Lynch, who was in charge of the irregular military forces. It was written to the political leader, and he told the latter that he would be only too pleased to have his views at any time on the general situation, and matters arising out of it would have his earnest consideration. They then had the political leader saying that this was too much of a good thing, and that it would not do; that the position of the political party must be straightened out, and that, if it was the policy of the party to leave it all to the Army, the obvious thing for members of the party to do was to resign their position as public representatives.

The position, the political leader declared in his letter, was: "We have all the responsibility and no voice and no authority." The political leader who wrote like that on September 12th wrote again on September 13th that the position, as he saw it, was that the Republican Party must take control, acting as the legitimate Dail with the Army Executive, or that the Army Executive must take control and assume responsibility, or that a joint committee should be formed to decide upon a policy for both.

The political leader added that he was against the first suggestion, because even if they had the allegiance of their Army they would not have the military strength to make their will effective, and "we cannot, as in the time of war with the British, point to authority derived from the vote of the majority of the people. We will be turned down definitely by the electorate in a few months' time in any case."

THE CHOICE.

The political leader chose the way out that the Army Executive take control and assume responsibility. He said he did so because it was most in accord with fact, and that the Army Executive must publicly accept responsibility. There must be no doubt in the minds of anybody on the matter.

The natural corollary was that they as a political party should cease to operate in any public way—resign in fact. Their position as public representatives was impossible.

As regards the suggestion that a joint committee should be formed to decide the policy for both, the political leader said, "I fear this is impracticable. The political party has to justify itself in a way that is not expected from the Army. If the Army wishes to elect some of the personnel of the party for its Executive, well and good; but I am afraid the task of riding two such horses as the party and the Army will be too much for any Executive." That was on the 13th September.

On the 14th the meeting was held, consisting of Count Plunkett, Miss MacSwiney, Tomas O'Donoghue, Cathal O'Murchadha, Mrs. Clarke, Deuig, Countess Markievicz, J. O'Mahony, Frank Fahy, Dr. Jim Ryan, Brian O'Higgins, and they agreed that the military should take over control and that they as a party—that was, as a political party—would co-operate.

NO DEALINGS.

So that from the point of view of the political side (proceeded General Mulcahy), and from the point of view of dealing in any kind of way with those people who are opposed to the Government at the present moment, they could not have it. They demonstrated that to themselves with broken hearts during the Army negotiations, and they did feel often themselves that some kind of hope might be held out to the country that the political leaders would throw up the sponge some day. They had now very definitely to get rid of that hope.

Here were people ruining the trade of the Irish people, shooting the Irish people, destroying their property, threatening the whole life of the country, and they had to deal with the situation that was around them. They had to deal with the people who took up this attitude.

They were not asking the Dail to adopt these proposals in a spirit of punishment. Those proposals were not made because there were certain people doing certain acts that they ought to be punished for. Those proposals were framed to act as a preventive against the destruction that was going on in the country. The power of life and death would not be put into the hands of anybody; it would be put into the hands of one of their own general officers commanding any particular district.

Those powers would give him better authority and better control over his men, and when he stood before a small number of them, with three of their comrades lying dead before them, he would not have to stand with his finger in his mouth, and say—"Well, you will have to be more careful when you go to Mass next Sunday."

NATIONAL INDISCIPLINE.

The biggest danger that they ran at the present time was national indiscipline, whether it was showing itself in Parliament or in the Ministry, or showing itself in the Army or in the people. There was so little public spirit in many parts of the country that trains could be raided and looted, and the goods brought to the houses of farmers, and the latter would accept the loot, because they said to themselves that some day the irregulars would come there and they would have to put them up.

There was not in the Army anything like those things, or anything like the irregularity that found its way into the propaganda sheets. The men in the Army had to put up with a terrible lot, and they did put up with a terrible lot, and, in asking for powers like these, the Government was making the request in order to prevent the men from taking upon themselves authority to execute people in an unauthorised way—and the danger that such executions would take place was great. They had happened in one or two instances, and, in thousands of instances where men had not the self-control that the majority of the men in the Army had, they might be exposed to similar temptation.

General Mulcahy instanced the fight between nine soldiers of the national Army and thirty irregulars between Swinford and Ballina. Five prisoners were taken, and, when they saw the dead body of a national soldier sitting in the back of the lorry, they grinned and made jeering remarks, and it was with difficulty that the officer prevented the dead soldier's comrades from shooting the five of them.

After the Macroom tragedy, when men of the national Army were blown to pieces, some of the irregulars who wished to surrender were shot.

They wanted to put their men into the position of being the chivalrous, gallant men that they had always been, to continue to show to those who were fighting against the country, in an ugly fashion, the chivalry and the kindness and the manly disposition that they had shown to them invariably during the past few months. (Cheers.)

AMENDMENTS.

Mr. Darrell Figgis said that he would be prepared to approve of the death penalty in certain circumstances, but the circumstances in which it could be inflicted should be specified in the resolutions, instead of the Dail being asked to sign a blank cheque. He might possibly approve of "no quarter" being extended to the attackers in the case of ambushes, or of the death penalty for the possession of arms when a man had been proved guilty of that offence before a competent court.

He thought, also, that it was time that certain persons who were helping, and were known to be helping, the forces of the opposition in this country should be proceeded against and their property attainted.

Mr. Figgis explained that he was about to move the following amendments:—

"(1) Wherever the word 'Government' appears to substitute the word 'Ministry.'"

"(2) Wherever the words 'Army authorities' appear, to substitute the words 'Minister for Defence.'"

"(3) In the third paragraph, at the end of sub-section (a), to read—'One person of legal knowledge and experience appointed by the Minister for Defence,' instead of the words that now conclude the sub-section."

"(4) In the ninth paragraph to read, 'and the detention by such military courts and committees of such persons for any period to be decided by them and/or until hostilities shall have come to an end,' instead of the words that now appear in that paragraph."

"(5) To add the following additional paragraph to the resolution:—

"And it confirms such sanction for a further period of fourteen days from the date of the passing of this resolution, subject to the renewal of such sanction for further period of time, in no one case to exceed fourteen days, as and when the Minister for Defence shall show cause on a report to the Dail on the state of the country under these powers hereby granted to him."

COMMITTEE.

Mr. O'Higgins intimated that the Ministry would be glad to have a vote one way or the other on the spirit of the resolution, and they could go into Committee afterwards to discuss points of detail. If amendments were now brought up there would be cross-voting and a confused issue.

Mr. Johnson said that if that course were adopted it would require some time for discussion, and notice of amendments should be served.

Mr. Figgis pointed out that he was not moving his amendments at this stage, but was defining his position towards the resolution. He submitted that they should not be asked to commit to anybody the responsibility of giving the death sentence in respect of an act and offence that had not been satisfied.

Mr. O'Higgins desired to stress the fact that they had not at present the power to deal adequately with the situation with which they were presented, and they had not at their disposal the tribunals necessary to deal adequately with the crimes which were so abundant throughout the country. It was not a pleasant task to place upon the army. The motion did not spring from the blood-lust of the Cosgraves, Mulcahys, and O'Higginses, but from the realisation of the whole Government of the urgency and gravity of the situation.

That was the highest court in the land, and they came to it to ask for an injunction against certain acts, and for a definite penalty in the event of a breach of that injunction. The acts against which they asked for that injunction were acts which were making rapidly for national death.

There had been talk, with much of which he agreed, about the gravity of taking human life. He did not think that any of them held human life cheaply, but when a difficult situation arose in which they must balance the human life against the life of the nation, the problem became very different. They considered that such a situation had come to pass in Ireland. They felt that if there was to be a check they must take measures much stronger than had been taken up to the present. The life of the nation was menaced politically, economically, and morally. Vital and fundamental things were challenged.

If the day came when the majority will would not be asserted there, and that the majority must bow to an armed minority, the country would have ceased to be a nation, and would become instead a rabble, dictated to by idealists with guns.

THE MENACE.

The nation was menaced economically, and there was a time limit, and to a large extent the task of the Government was a task against time. Last December there were 130,000 people out of employment, and he did not know to what figure it had since swelled, but he knew that the ties which bound society and the ordered fabric of the State were strained to breaking point. He knew that the able Englishman who was leading the opposition to the Government had his eye on one objective, and that was the complete breakdown of the social and economic fabric of the country. His programme was negative and purely destructive, and it would be victory for him if he prevented the Government from coming into existence under the terms of the Treaty. He had no constructive programme, and so he kept steadily, callously, and ghoulishly on his path of striking deadly blows.

Mr. Davin—Who are you referring to?

Mr. O'Higgins—I am referring to the Englishman, Erskine Childers, and I trust that the deputies did not think that my words were capable of reference to anyone else.

The Minister of Home Affairs, continuing, said that it was quite definitely their duty to face the facts. They had to realise that there was a limit, and to realise that it was very largely a question of time in which they had to take what they considered the most effective steps to check this headlong race to ruin.

It would, perhaps, be a generous estimate to say that 20 per cent. of the militant opposition of this Government was idealist. It would, perhaps, be too generous an estimate to say, also, that 20 per cent. of it also was criminal. Between these two 20 per cents. there floated a 60 per cent. of sheer futility. It was neither one thing nor the other. It would go on until some very definite reason was put up to it why it should not go on, and they hoped to put up such a reason. They thought that such a reason was embodied in the terms of the Government resolutions.

CLEAR THINKING.

If this country failed to get through, failed to win out a democratic Government, it would be unfortunate. If the country failed to win a democratic Government because of any lack of clear thinking by those who were responsible it would be criminal. They would not do that. Deputies must not allow the softness of their hearts to spread to their heads in considering these resolutions, but must get strongly and steadily in mind that the men who were striking hammer blows at their political and economic life were striking those blows because they thought that they could strike them with a fair prospect of comparative immunity.

They would continue so long as they continued in the belief that the penalty was only going to be internment under comfortable conditions.

Certain things, he said, had been spoken of there, and referred to as acts of indiscipline. Deputy Johnson had remarked that in the setting up of this machinery they were taking steps likely to lead to an increase of such acts of indiscipline. He joined issue on that. They were taking steps which would ensure the disappearance of such acts of indiscipline. They were placed in a position in which they must carry more of the load than the ordinary citizen of the country.

A murderous ambush had taken place in Leix, in which three very gallant officers of the national army lost their lives. Concerning that, they knew the common thought among the people from one end of the country to the other. He did not endorse that; but they knew that it was said, "Why did they take prisoners when these 25 men surrendered to six after firing their murderous volleys at those three officers?" There was no case of indiscipline there.

This country, he continued, could not indefinitely endure what it has been through in this black year since last December. It was within their knowledge that the Government had duties as well as responsibilities out of all proportion to the machinery at its disposal. It was in their knowledge that the Government had at the moment only 1,500 police; that the civil tribunals of the country were peculiarly placed at the moment.

TRUST THE ARMY.

He did not think that the Dail should have any misgivings in trusting the national Army, who had not shown in the past few months any particular blood lust. They had shown that they did not forget that some of those pitted against them were, to some extent at any rate, men who fought with them in the past, and they had shown all the time that they did not forget that they were dealing with their own people.

He did not think sufficient attention had been paid to the safeguards which these regulations contain with regard to the proper trial and fair consideration of evidence.

Mr. O'Higgins quoted the reference to the presence in these military courts of a person of legal knowledge and experience.

He thought that it was realised that no man in the Government would expound to his colleagues a project such as this for any other motive than the belief that the national situation demanded action of this kind, and in no other way could the national life be saved. It was from that conviction, and not from blood lust, that they submitted the resolution.

Things could not go on as they were, and he trusted that members would have the manliness to vote on the resolution, despite threats from outside of the consequences if they supported it. They felt that they could judge how much time was left in which the situation could be saved.

To-morrow or next day they would be dealing with a question of an oath, and it seemed to him that in that oath it was not an acknowledgment of the majesty of any particular person, but that it was bowing the head to the majority of the country. There must be that bowing of the head if this country was to be saved. If it was to go down a futile thing they were determined that it would not be through any fault of theirs. (Applause.)

MISGIVINGS.

Mr. Gerald FitzGibbon, K.C., said that after what the Minister of Home Affairs had said he would vote for the Ministry on the motion, but he would do so with the most profund misgivings, an dhe should be very greatly relieved if some Minister before the debate closed could give some answer to the question raised by the Senior Deputy for Dublin.

The President stated that particulars of the rights of prisoners would be laid on the table.

Mr. FitzGibbon said that the only ground on which a lawyer could stand over the resolution was that necessity knew no law. Following the statement of the Minister of Home Affairs he felt himself coerced, to support the Government, but he appealed to them to define what was meant by "Army authorities," so that it would not be in the power of any young subaltern in the country to get up and say, "I am the Army authority."

It might be justifiable to inflict the death penalty in present circumstances for the first three offences mentioned in the resolution, but as regards the fourth instance he thought it should be provided that no death penalty be inflicted until that House had an opportunity of disallowing it. He suggested the amendment of that clause by providing that no such General Order should come into force until it was laid on the table of the House for four days, and that the House had an opportunity of disallowing the regulation before anyone was executed under it. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Davin contended that by the resolution they were setting up a military dictatorship.

Mr. Gavin Duffy stated that he had been in favour of a military dictatorship from the beginning of the war, because he trusted military guidance in such matters, and because political control in such cases was a sham.

Dr. McCartan said that they would not frighten the irregulars by threatening to execute them. If they did execute them the Free State was gone for ever. If a state of war existed they should be treated as prisoners of war.

PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

The President said that if the people of the country were going to be stampeded by irregular propaganda or sentiment into getting rid of the Free State that was their own responsibility, and they were welcome to it. Deputy Johnson, as far as he could hear, did not express any sympathy with the soldiers that were being murdered by irregular bands, but his remissness was corrected by Deputy O'Shannon.

Three cases had been cited, and they were taxed with some responsibility in that respect. He knew nothing whatever about these cases, and he might as well have taxed Deputy Johnson with a whole list of cases where postal officials had been threatened, and it was unreasonable to expect that the Minister for Defence could control every single soldier in the Army.

The Army had been remarkable for the restraint shown, as was testified to by foreigners and the Press.

The resolutions were put down for the purpose of ensuring some sort of security and justice for those of their troops who were being continually harassed. In the irregular propaganda he found that a particular individual mentioned by Deputy Johnson had fought for the republic since the Four Courts. He never heard of the man before, but that was part of the thing they had to put up with, and it was time a strong hand was shown against such individuals.

DEATH PENALTY.

Neither he nor the Minister for Defence had any objection in cases where the death penalty was imposed by a Court to bring it before the Ministry for sanction or otherwise, and it was laid down that the papers should be placed on the table of the House, the sentence to take effect within four days unless the Dail passed a resolution disallowing it.

It would be admitted that in the present state of society verdicts would be hard to get, but they wanted to let the malcontents in the country know that there was an alternative. The war had been now on for three months, and the military authorities had not executed a single prisoner. He thought the history of no country had such a record as that.

Mr. Johnson said that the objection did not lie in that, but in the handing over such authority to the Army.

The President said that the reason for the handing over was due to the fact that people could not be brought to justice owing to irregular activity.

NOT PRISONERS OF WAR.

Mr. Johnson asked would prisoners be treated as prisoners of war.

Mr. Cosgrave replied, emphatically, "No; certainly not," adding that it should be recollected that there was a state of war in the country, as mentioned in the Law Courts the other day—a state of war or rebellion, or what was described in France as a state of siege. Were they going to let a hundred men or a thousand men getting arms and laying waste to a street or a countryside—were they going to treat these men as prisoners of war? Not likely!

He had already explained what war conditions were. As to the power regarding seizures of property, he mentioned that in one district where irregulars seized property, practically all the property was restored when an officer threatened the death penalty. If such measures had been adopted from the beginning there would be very few in the ranks of the I.R.A. asking for hot water for shaving in the morning. (Laughter.) One gentleman responsible for the death of one of their most brilliant officers demanded hot water for shaving when in prison.

After some further discussion the following motion was proposed by the President, seconded by the Minister for Home Affairs:—

"This Dail approves of the principle of the resolution submitted by the President, and goes into Committee to consider same to-morrow (Thursday)."

On a division there voted:—

For the motion	48
Against	18
Government majority	30

COMPOSITION OF THE SENATE.

AGREEMENT WITH UNIONISTS.

The following memorandum was circulated among the members of the Provisional Parliament yesterday:—

The following are the agreements arrived at between the late President Griffith and Mr. Kevin O'Higgins, on the one hand, and the Southern Unionists, on the other.

It should be mentioned, first, that the adoption of the principle of proportional representation in the elections for the Dail was one of the matters offered in the Draft Constitution itself as originally prepared for the purpose of giving effect to President Griffith's undertaking in his published statement on the subject.

This matter is, therefore, not mentioned among the following heads of agreement, because they were started on the assumption that that was already agreed to.

The heads are, therefore, as follows:—

1. The Senate to consist of 60 members, of whom two are to be elected by the National University of Ireland and two by the Dublin University. If the Six Counties remain in the Free State, there would also be two members added from the University of Belfast.

2. The remaining 56 members of the Senate to be elected from a panel, consisting of three times the number of members to be elected, of whom two-thirds are to be nominated by the Dail and one-third by the Senate, in which case voting according to principles of proportional representation and also of persons who have at any time been members of the Senate and indicate their desire to be included on the panel.

3. The electorate for the Senate to be persons of 30 years and upwards.

4. The period between the first presentation of a bill to the Senate and the date upon which it shall be deemed to be passed, whether the Senate agree or not, to be 270 days, as provided by Article 37 of the Draft.

5. Power to be given to three-fifths of the members of the Senate to require a referendum during the 90-day period mentioned in Article 46, without a petition signed, as there provided, that is to say, a three-fifth majority of the Senate in session and voting may call for a referendum, or, in the alternative, the petition there mentioned to remain.

6. Provision to be made for joint debate of the two Houses in cases of disagreement, but not for joint voting (see end of Article 37). This provision not to be applied to a money bill.

7. Decision on a referendum to be final, without further delay. Voting at the referendum to be by ballot.

8. The question whether any particular bill is or is not a money bill to be certified by the Speaker of the Dail, subject to appeal to a Committee of Privileges, drawn equally from both Houses, presided over by a Judge of the Supreme Court, who shall have a casting vote, but no other vote.

THE FIRST SENATE.

9. The first Senate to be one-half nominated, and the other half elected by the Dail, the whole to be divided into four classes, of whom one-half of the nominated members retire from office at the end of twelve years, half of the elected members at the end of nine years, the remaining half of the nominated members at the end of six years, and the remaining half of the elected members at the end of three years. The nominated members to be nominated by the President in manner calculated to represent minorities of interests not represented adequately in the Dail, and such nomination to be made on the advice of the following bodies:—Chambers of Commerce, College of Physicians and College of Surgeons, Benchers of King's Inns and Incorporated Law Society, the Corporations of Dublin and Cork. The stipulation as to consultation not to be embodied in the Constitution, but to be contained in an undertaking to be embodied in a resolution of the new Parliament. The text of the resolution to be submitted to the Provisional Government was agreed between President Griffith, the Southern Unionists, and the British Government, and will be properly submitted when that portion of the Constitution is dealt with.

10. A matter which gave rise to considerable difference of opinion, and was ultimately, after much debate, agreed to, was that the constituency for the election of Senators should be the Irish Free State, taken as a whole.

11. It was also agreed that the term of office of a Senator should be twelve years, and that no person should be eligible for election who had not reached the age of 35 years.

12. The clauses in which these various headings of agreement are set out were first settled by the Law Officer on behalf of the Provisional Government, and by Sir F. Greer and Sir F. Liddell on behalf of the British Government and the Southern Unionists, and the texts were submitted at a conference and agreed to as they are now contained in the Draft Constitution.

13. All these matters are the subject of deliberate agreement between the Irish Government representatives and the Southern Unionists and the British Government; and the Irish Government is accordingly bound to pass all these provisions as Government provisions.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION CAPTURED.

The Army Bulletin states that on the night of the 25th inst. troops raided Barbaville House, Drumcree. The house was partly surrounded when they were fired on. One irregular was taken prisoner and the following captures made:—3 Lee-Enfield rifles, 1 Smith and Wesson revolver, 3 dozen bombs, 150 rounds .303, 1 coil cable, 2 boxes detonators, 1 Ford van (marked Dolphin's Barn, YI.376), 1 Hupmobile car; also some equipment which the irregulars had previously taken from Oldcastle Barracks.

DUBLIN BOMB OUTRAGE.

CIVILIANS AND SOLDIERS WOUNDED.

While a lorry occupied by national troops was passing from Grattan Bridge into Parliament street yesterday afternoon a bomb was thrown from the corner of Essex street and exploded beside it.

A boy named James Foley, of Capel street, and James M'Kane, a railway employé, were wounded by splinters. Foley was struck on the right eye, the sight of which, it is feared, he will lose. He was taken to hospital and detained for treatment. M'Kane was struck on the thigh, the splinter in his case inflicting a superficial wound.

Several other people, including the driver of the lorry and two soldiers, were slightly injured, and the body of the vehicle was damaged. The bomb exploded with terrific force, and caused consternation in the district. National troops hurried to the scene and searched the locality. Some civilians were detained for the moment, and one was arrested and taken under escort to Exchange Court pending further investigation.

PATROL ATTACKED.

FIGHT AT A GRAVEYARD.

At 11 p.m. on the 22nd inst., at Ballylannan Graveyard, says the Army Bulletin, a patrol was attacked by a party of irregulars estimated at between 40 and 50. A fight lasting one and a half hours ensued, and the attackers retired under cover of darkness. Lieutenant Kennedy had his forehead grazed by a bomb splinter, but was not injured, and a soldier was slightly wounded in the hand. Two of the irregulars are believed to have been wounded, and subsequently four irregulars were captured. Two sporting guns, 5 cartridges, a quantity of buckshot and a post office bicycle were also taken. Irregulars attempted to ambuch a detachment of troops which came to the relief of Lieutenant Kennedy, about one and a half miles from Wexford, on their return journey. Two bombs were thrown and about 40 shots fired. The troops returned the fire and the attackers made off. There were no casualties amongst the troops. The irregulars' casualties are unknown.

INNISHANNON AMBUSH.

NATIONAL SOLDIER KILLED.

National troops were ambushed last Saturday night in a thickly-wooded valley near Innishannon, four miles from Bandon. The irregulars were posted in well-concealed positions across the river, and when the Crossley tender, with a small party of troops, came along fire from Thomson guns and rifles was opened on it. One of the soldiers was wounded in the head and he died within a few hours.

ARRESTS IN CO. GALWAY.

COMPENSATION FOR INJURIES.

On Sunday last a party of troops, under Captain O'Donnell and Lieutenant Byrnes, arrested eight men from the Castle-ellen district (County Galway), well-known irregular sympathisers. They had been very prominent in barricading roads and felling trees. Their houses were raided, and cross-cuts, pickaxes, shovels, etc., were found. These were taken by the troops, and the men were compelled to clear all the roads round Athenry. They were also obliged to pay 30s. each as compensation to the man whose trees they had cut. They were released on giving an undertaking that they would take no further part in operations against the national forces.

At 9 p.m. on the 25th September a party of troops, under Brigadier Callinan and Captain Thompson, arrested five men in Tarramid, Clarenbridge, and compelled them to clear the roads in that district. These men had been prominent in blocking these roads. They were released on giving the usual undertaking. The party subsequently arrested five well-known irregulars.

The prisoners' names are:—William Kelly, Coldwood, Athenry; William Commins, Coldwood, Athenry; Thomas Holland, Derrydonnell, Athenry; Michael Freaney, Derrydonnell, Athenry; John Hynes, Clarenbridge. Revolvers and ammunition were found on Kelly and Commins.

"DUBLIN DOING NOTHING."

A CAPTURED DOCUMENT.

The Army Bulletin contains the following:—

"A circular letter from 'Headquarters, Dublin Brigade, recently captured, reads:—

"Particulars asked for during past six weeks have not as yet come to hand. These include number of men arrested, number killed, number died of wounds, or wounded in each battalion area, or reports of activity in each battalion area. You will please see that battalions should do that at once. If these cannot be furnished by battalions, it seems that there is no such thing as a battalion or brigade organisation, and certainly the enemy has not hit us so hard as to make us believe that such a state of affairs exist."

"Further down the circular reads:—

"The Chief of Staff, who is in the South of Ireland, together with the Brigade Commandants of even neighbouring brigades, are all saying that Dublin is doing nothing. How can I refute these charges when reports are not sent to me, and if I cannot produce lists of arrests and other casualties? How can I mention that the organisation of the brigade had been seriously impaired by the enemy action. If the present company, officers, and adjutants are not carrying out their duties, we will have to pick men from the ranks who are capable and willing."

THREATENING MOTOR CARS.

Last Sunday notices were posted in Connemara district worning motorists that after the 30th September, 1922, all motor cars passing through Connemara, irrespective of who was in them, would be fired on. In one instance these notices, which were posted on the church gates, were torn down by the priest.

PUBLIC-HOUSE RAIDED.

The licensed premises of Mrs. McGuinness, Malahide road, Dublin, were raided last night by three men, who came in a motor car, and took away all the money that was in the cash register.

SHOTS ON THE BORDER.

Shots are reported to have been fired from the Free State side of Ballagh Bridge, in the Aughnacloy district, early on Tuesday morning at the Specials' sentry on guard. The latter did not reply to the firing, and no casualties are reported.

NATIONAL TROOPS IN RATHDOWNEY.

A garrison of the national forces has arrived in Rathdowney and taken up quarters in the old Royal Irish Constabulary Barracks. They are under the command of Lieutenant Kealy. Their arrival was the cause of great jubilation among the people, who till now had no protection.

TIME VERSUS PIECE RATES.

EFFECT ON SHIPBUILDING OUTPUT.

The report of the Joint Investigation Committee appointed by the Engineering and National Employers' Federation, the Shipbuilding Employers' Federation, and the Trade Union Negotiatng Commttee, to consder the men's demand that workng hours should be reduced to 44 hours per week, was issued yesterday. The Committee confines itself to presenting the data collected, and makes no statement of views. Interesting figures are given in comparing output on time rates and piecework.

Mechanics, fitting water-tight sliding shutters, took 490 hours on the operation when paid time rates, and only 150 hours when payment by results was introduced. Shipwrights worked on piece rates for laying decks until their union interfered, and it was found that output more than doubled under piece rates, as compared with time payment. A ship built on time rates took 2,601 hours, while a sister vessel, built on the payment by results system, was completed in 1,151 hours.

Riveters paid on time manipulated 176 rivets per squad per week, while operators paid by results placed 722 rivets per week.

The Committee add that where there was a change from time-work to piece-work, not only output, but earnings, increased.

MEATH DIOCESAN SYNOD.

The Lord Bishop of Meath has named Thursday, the 12th of October, 1922, at 12.30 p.m., for the meeting of the Diocesan Synod to be held in the Synod Hall, Christ Church P' •, Dublin.—(Advt.)

NEAR EAST.

A Constantinople telegram, dated Tuesday, to the Associated Press of New York says:—While the Anatolian Cabinet is completing its reply to the Allied Note, the Nationalist Army continues to make a feverish concentration of troops on the Ismid and Chanak lines. Kemal Pasha now has 1,100 men at Kumkeleh, 5,000 at Adramid, and 10,000 at Karassi, as well as considerable forces in other areas.

The Nationalist leader expects that these concentrations will be completed by September 30. This date coincides with the date when the refugees will be cleared out of Smyrna. It is significant that Neuradin Pasha, the Military Governor of Smyrna, has declared that he cannot guarantee the lives of the Christians in Smyrna after that date.

The British are no less busy in strengthening their lines, and checkmating every move of the Nationalists. Further arrivals of military and naval units are daily augmenting the British garrisons, and inversely impairing Kemal's chances of successfully attacking the Straits.

The Sea of Marmora and the Bosphorus are dotted with the most modern war craft, reminding one of the fateful days of Gallipoli. The British Fleet now includes six dreadnoughts, seven battle cruisers, twenty destroyers, several submarines, and aircraft carriers.

This great Armada and the increase in the British land forces to upwards of 30,000 has quieted the frayed nerves of the anxious Christian population of the capital.

GREEK WARSHIP WITHDRAWN.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Wednesday.

The Greek cruiser, Averoff, whose presence in Turkish waters has been the subject of much comment as constituting a violation of the neutrality proclaimed by the Allies, left to-day at noon at the request of the Allies' representatives.—(Reuter.)

Reuter's Agency is officially informed that at the request of the Allies the Greek warship Averoff has been withdrawn from Turkish waters.

TROOPS FOR THE EAST.

THREE BATTALIONS SAIL.

Despite pouring rain there was an enthusiastic crowd at Tilbury Docks yesterday to witness the departure of the 3rd Battalion, the Coldstream Guards, and the 2nd Battalion, the Royal Fusiliers for the Near East.

During the morning advance parties were busily engaged in stowing the baggage on the troopship, the Orient liner, Huntsgreen. The main body of the Coldstreams arrived at one o'clock and the men, who were in full service kit and seemed in high spirits, commenced to file on board. Many relatives made the journey from London to wish the men God-speed.

Among those present were General Codrington, Colonel of the regiment, and Major-General Jeffries, commanding the London district.

The train conveying the Royal Fusiliers arrived at a quarter past two o'clock, and the final stages of the embarkation were speedily completed. By four o'clock the last farewells were exchanged and the gangways withdrawn.

Three tugs took charge of the ship, and as she began to move the crowd on shore enthusiastically cheered the departing troops, who replied with much heartiness. As the Huntsgreen passed through the dock gates the demonstration was renewed, and when she entered the river the men had a final enthusiastic send-off from the boys of the training ship Warspite, who, stationed at the Tilbury Hotel, lined the balconies and gave round after round of cheers.

Amid the hooting of the syrens of the vessels on the river, the Huntsgreen steamed down the Thames on her voyage to the Near East.

Officers and men of the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade and the First Brigade Staff, to the number of 800, with details of the Royal Army Medical Corps, sailed from Southampton for the Near East yesterday on the chartered liner Manora. General Steele was in command of the troops.

ORDERS TO AMERICAN SHIPS.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday.

In response to the request of Admiral Bristol, Mr. Edwin Denby, Secretary of the Navy, has ordered two destroyer divisions, comprising twelve destroyers, to proceed as soon as possible from Norfolk to Constantinople with an extra supply of provisions. The supply ship Bridge will also proceed as soon as possible to Constantinople. The purpose of sending the ships was declared to protect American interests. The method of distribution and the general use to be made of the supplies wil lbe determined by Admiral Bristol.—(Reuter.)

MESSAGE FROM THE POPE.

ROME, Wednesday.

The Pope has telegraphed to Mustapha Kemal Pasha expressing the hope for a speedy conclusion of peace and urging him to avert further bloodshed.—(Reuter.)

INCOME TAX REDUCTION.

NOT AFFECTED BY CRISIS.

Concerning a statement that the cost of naval, military, and Air Force preparations in the Near East will deprive the income tax payer of the 1s. relief promised, the Treasury states that the suggestion is ludicrous so far as the current year is concerned. The concession has been definitely made, and there can be no question of cancelling it.

KING CONSTANTINE.

SECOND ABDICATION.

Constantine, King of the Hellenes, was born on August 3, 1868, and succeeded to the Throne on March 18, 1913. He married on October 28, 1889, the Princess Sophie, sister of the ex-Kaiser.

At the outbreak of the European War the sympathies of the Royal House leaned towards Germany, but under the influence of M. Venizelos Greece eventually took the side of the Allies and fought against Germany. King Constantine abdicated on June 11, 1917, and was followed into exile by the Crown Prince George. Prince Alexander, the second son, acceded. He died on October 25, 1920.

The Crown was offered to his younger brother, Prince Paul, a minor, a Regency being proclaimed in the meantime.

In November a general election drove the Venizelists out of office, and the Regent was called upon to resign. A national plebiscite restored Constantine to the Throne on December 19, 1920.

INJURED PROPERTY.

CASES AT NEWRY QUARTER SESSIONS.

At Newry Special Quarter Sessions yesterday, before Judge Bates, K.C., Stephen Tracey, 44 Wellington street, Dublin, was awarded £750 compensation and £30 witnesses' expenses for injuries received on 9th December last. The applicant was interned in Ballykinlar Camp, and on the date in question, when all prisoners were released, shots were fired at the train in which the applicant and others were, after passing Ballywood Station, and a bullet penetrated one of his feet, so severly injuring him that he was still unable to work at his occupation as a woodworker and machinist with Messrs. Scott, church furniture manufacturers, Abbey street, Dublin.

A CLAIM REFUSED.

At the same Court Michael Mellon, Crobane, claimed £2,000 for personal injuries by shooting on 3rd August last.

There had been an ambush of "Specials" near Ryan's Presbyterian Church, and applicant, who was cycling home from Mass in Newry, stated that he was taken into the "Specials'" armoured car that had previously passed him, and he was beaten and kicked and threatened with death. At Mayobridge, where all the police save two, were in a public-house, he got out of the lorry and attempted to run away in fear of his life, when he was fired on and so badly wounded that he was for over three months in Newry Hospital. No charge was ever made again him of having ammunition or anything else, and he never had any.

Applicant's counsel argued that the police were an unlawful assembly at the time, and referred to the decision of Lord Chief Justice Henry in the case of Macken v. the Armagh County Council in support of his contention.

His Honour held that the police having gone out in the lawful execution of their duty, and remained together as a body, he could not hold, even admitting that the facts were as deposed to, that they were an unlawful assembly within the meaning of the Act, and asked counsel if he had not thought of obtaining redress by some other action. He held that the county should not be held liable for military or police excesses, and dismissed the case with costs, at the same time suggesting that applicant should bring his case before the notice of the proper authorities.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

WOMAN AND THE CONSTITUTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—I fancy that many women besides myself read with amazement the report of last Monday's debate in the Dail on Article 3 of the Draft Constitution. By a Government amendment this article was altered by the substitution for the sentence "Men and women have equal rights as citizens" of "Men and women have equal political rights." The speeches made by some of the Ministers and deputies would much better have suited the British House of Commons of, say, 1870, than the Irish Free State Dail of 1922.

Deputy FitzGibbon (T.C.D.) declared that "if they desired to confer privileges on women they could do so by altering the law, so as to make it conform to their ideas of justice." It might be well to remind this deputy that what women seek are not "privileges," but rights, and that for these rights they are not willing to rely on men's "ideas of justice."

The Government amendment, by confining the equality guaranteed to women to political matters only, opens a door for the introduction of limitations to their activities and opportunities in other departments. That this was intended is plainly evident from President Cosgrave's speech. The poor excuse for the alteration made by the Minister of Home Affairs, who declared that the object of the Government was "to deprive a man of the right to plead in Court, when charged with an offence that he did it because of duress on the part of his wife," attains the limits of absurdity. Suicide would be the only refuge of such a husband from the ridicule which would pursue him. But why not abolish the duress plea altogether, as the British Parliament is about to do?

I understand that Deputy Magennis has listed an amendment to Clause 3 for the third reading of the Constitution Bill, which reads as follows:—"Men and women are guaranteed equal rights of citizenship, and shall be eligible for public office and employment, without distinction, according to abilities and qualification."

I venture to suggest that all women voters who support the Free State should urge their Parliamentary representatives to support this amendment. Perhaps, they might also remind them that women's votes count, and that an election is near.—Yours, etc.,

Mary Hayden.

THE POSTAL STRIKE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—Referring to my letter in your issue of the 25th inst., as I have been asked by several influential business men to explain my views, I feel that I should do so.

(1) I think that every effort should be made at once to settle the Post Office strike by arbitration.

(2) I believe that this could be done by common-sense business men, and the Government should welcome such assistance in this and other important matters in connection with getting the country into some sort of working order.

In my humble opinion the principal cause of the Post Office and other strikes is the high cost of living, and until this is remedied wages cannot be reduced. What have the Government done in this respect? As far as I can see, nothing. It appears to me that prices should have been regulated before wages were reduced. The "bogey" high wages cannot be the cause of all the high prices. Dublin to-day is the most expensive city in Europe for the middle class or working man to live in.

This Post Office strike is costing the country millions. If the Government would spend a million or two in building houses for the working classes and in providing a public market where meat and vegetables, etc., could be purchased, there would in a short time be no difficulty in reducing wages where necessary. Personally, I can only say that I am paying more to-day for rent and food than I have paid at any period during the war, and my business is paralysed. It seems unnecessary to illustrate further. My remarks are intended to apply to Dublin. Other districts should be treated according to prevailing conditions.—Yours, etc.,

T. M. O'Callaghan.

September 27th, 1922.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—You again ask for a cessation of the postal strike by the submission of the strikers, suggesting that the Government would welcome the removal of every legitimate grievance. Perhaps, the offer of special consideration for the married worker with young children might open a way towards peace. Such a scheme has been introduced in France, and is known as the "sursalaire," which may be translated as "extra wage" or, more expressively, as "family wage." Originally introduced in the building trades, it has spread to many branches of the Civil Service. In these branches a supplement of 2s. per week is paid for each of the first two children of an employé, and 3s. per week for each additional child under 16 years of age. Magnanimity, as well as firmness, should characterise a Government.—Yours, etc.,

"Lin."

DISTRESS IN DUBLIN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—There are numerous unemployed whose families are suffering keenly; but the worst of are the widows with orphan children. To help them a jumble sale is to be held on Saturday next in St. Barnabas's Schools, North Wall. I earnestly appeal to your readers for supplies of clothing, food or other useful articles that they may be able to give. The funds obtained will be applied in giving clothing orders to the mothers.—Yours, etc.,

THE FIREARMS ACT.

SERIOUS CHARGES TRIED AT NEWRY.

At Newry yesterday, before Major McCallum, R.M., and Mr. W. G. Duff, R.M.,

John Moorhead, Mountain View terrace, Newry, was charged with having in his possession and under his control on the 15th September, a revolver and five rounds of ammunition, contrary to the Firearms Act, 1920.

It appeared that on the night in question the defendant, a "B" Special, while in plain clothes, held up and searched at the point of a revolver Joseph McArevey, managing clerk in the Newry Mineral Water Company, who then lodged a complaint at the barrack.

The Court fined the defendant £5 and costs, and forfeited the revolver.

Robert Wallace, farmer, Drumcrow, Whitecross, was charged with having in his possession and under his control on the 17th inst firearms and ammunition, contrary to the Firearms Act.

From the evidence it appeared that when the defendant's house was searched a double barrelled shot gun and a pair of binoculars were found. In the garden, concealed in a bank, there were discovered one revolver and 18 rounds of ammunition for same, one Mills bomb loaded and detonated, 36 rounds of .380 ammunition, about one pound of blasting powder, one large iron axle bearing, and one round of 12 bore ammunition.

The solicitor for the defendant pleaded guilty. Defendant had some months ago applied for a permit for the gun which was found in the house. The stuff found in the garden had been got by him prior to 1914 for his own protection, except the bomb, which he afterwards got by legitimate means. The axle bearing was used by him for hiding money. Houses were frequently raided in the locality and money stolen. Defendant was a loyal citizen, and had no criminal intent. He had a wife and four children.

Evidence was given in support of the statement that defendant was a hard-working, loyal man.

The Court fined the defendant £10 and costs, or in default two months, and forfeited all the articles.

Three young men, named John Duffy, Albert Heaney, and Patrick Breslin, from Dundalk, were charged with having in their possession and under their control on the 15th September, at Coolderry, in the Crossmaglen area of Co. Armagh, firearms and ammunition, contrary to the Firearms and Explosive Substances Act.

The evidence showed that on the night in question the defendants were found by a party of Special Constabulary sitting before the fire in the house of a man named Peter Comiskey. Breslin was wearing a belt with a holster containing a fully loaded Colt revolver and 48 rounds of .455 ammunition. John Duffy was wearing a belt with holster containing a fully loaded Colt revolver and 20 rounds of .455 ammunition, and a gauge cleaner. Albert Heaney had an empty .303 ammunition charger.

The Bench discharged Heaney, and returned Breslin and Duffy in custody to the next County Armagh Assizes.

Peter Comiskey was charged with having harboured the men, knowing that they were acting in contravention of the Firearms Act, and with having aided and abetted them to commit an act calculated to be prejudicial to the preservation of the peace and maintenance of order in Northern Ireland.

The defendant stated that he just got home from Dundalk about five minutes before the Specials arrived at his house. He saw the defendants sitting at the fire, but did not know they were armed.

In view of the good character given the defendant, the magistrates ordered him to be imprisoned till the rising of the court, and to enter into his own recognisances of £20 to keep the peace for six months.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES.

IRISH STOCK EXCHANGES.

DUBLIN.

DEALING GREATLY RESTRICTED. FUNDS IRREGULAR. BANK STOCK RELAPSES AND THEN RALLIES. CASTLEBELLINGHAM BREWERIES SCARCE. TEXTILES DULL. TOBACCOS BETTER.

There was again, as might be supposed, only a very trifling amount of dealing current on the Dublin Stock Exchange owing to the postal dislocation, but a good deal of business was passing in Government Funds at irregular prices. India Stock fell back further. Bank of Ireland Stock opened a couple of points lower, but later recovered a moiety of the loss. There was bidding again for Castlebellingham and Drogheda Brewery Shares, in anticipation of the result of the past year's operations, expected shortly. Guinness issues closed dull and the turn easier after an earlier trifling improvement in the Ord. Shares. Marconis rallied. Beyond some support for Great Northern issues at last prices, the rest of the Railway market was flat and neglected. Trams, Dunlops, Gas, Bakery, Trading, and Miscellaneous Securities were passed over again. Textiles show further reactions, but Tobacco Shares were again a fraction higher.

In the Funds, War Loan 4½ p.c. rose ⅛ to 96⅜, ditto 4 p.c. (tax free) 1/16 to 100, and Victory Bonds ⅜ to 88⅜, but Consols fell ⅛ to 56⅝, War Loan 5 p.c. 1/16 to 99¾, and India 3½ p.c. 1 to 65½.

Banking Securities were neglected outside Bank of Ireland Stock, which opened 2 lower at 223, and then rallied 1 to 224.

Among Breweries, Castlebellingham and Drogheda Ord. were bid up 2s. 6d. to 75s. without getting a share. The Debs. rose 1¼ to 59½. Guinness Ord. opened 1/16 better at 42⅝, but later the quotation slipped back to 42½, and the Pref. 1/16 to 11⅛.

In Marconis, the Ord. rose 9d. to 46s., and Radio Common quoted 20s.

Dealing in Home Rails was confined to Great Northern. The Ord. repeated 56½, and the Deb. Stock 75.

In Drapery Shares an odd lot of Arnott Ord. was picked up at 5, the last price.

As regards Manufacturing Shares, British-American Tobacco rose 3d. to 87s. 3d., and Imperials 3d. to 68s. 10½d., while Coats fell 6d. to 66s., and Cottons 9d. to 46s. 3d.

BELFAST.

Business on the Belfast Exchange was very slack, and there were few transactions of importance. War Loan was slightly improved at 99⅝ inscribed, and 99¾ ⅞ registered. Northern Bank Co. was unchanged at 4⅞, 4¾. M'Connell's Distillery Ltd. were done at 4¼, and Old Bushmills at 2¼. British-American Tobacco were fractionally lower at 86s. 6d., while Imperial Tobacco were a few pence better at 68s. 9d. Lever Bros. 7 per cent. Pref. repeated 19s. 7½d. Mexican Eagles Pref. were quoted 19s. 10½d., and Fairbairn Lawson Notes 103½

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

Politics, of course, are mainly responsible for the dearth of new capital issues, but there is another reason—the old practice of making a widespread appeal to the public for subscriptions has in recent months given place to a new—whereby underwriters have taken big blocks of stock "firm," and public support has not been solicited, except to a very moderate extent. In acting thus, underwriters have been disappointed in their expectations. They hoped to secure their ordinary commission, plus a "turn" in disposing of their holdings to the public through market channels. The public, however, have not come forward as anticipated, and the underwriters are left with big lines of stock to nurse. This means a strain on their financial resources and renders them unwilling to take fresh responsibilities.

Hence, new issues are held up, because underwriting is not easy to place. Thus, both the underwriter and the issuing house are brought to a standstill, whereas if the old practice of making a direct and widespread appeal to the public had been originally adopted, the stocks now causing indigestion would probably have been placed, and the way left clear for further new issues. There is much to be said for the old practice of direct solicitation to the public for support of new capital issued, and very little for the new.

In another month's time the 5 p.c. War Loan will be marked x.d. Thereafter purchasers will not be entitled to the half-yearly interest, due December 1. Allowing for this the stock at yesterday's price of 99¾ looks uncommonly cheap, especially as it carries almost four months' interest. The possibility of repayment at par in 1929 is considered the drawback to War Loan as a permanent investment. Conversion Loan, on the other hand, is regarded by many to be the acme of investment excellence for two reasons. First, its maturity ensures immunity from disturbance for a long period, and thus gives ample scope for gradual appreciation towards its par value. Second, apart from War Loan, it gives the highest yield today among long-dated Government stocks.

Hopes regarding the position of Grand Trunk Pacific 4 p.c. Deb. Stock, whose interest arrears have been the subject of so much controversy of late, have been revived by the half-yearly revenue statement of the Grand Trunk Railway just to hand from Ottawa. This shows that, despite a falling off in gross receipts, there was an operating surplus for the six months of $4,000,000 (£800,000) as compared with $1,250,000 (£250,000) last year. Calculations are, naturally, being made as to how this will affect the Grand Trunk Pacific, and the idea is gaining ground that if the improvement continues the ability of the Grand Trunk to meet its interest obligations on Pacific 4 p.c. Deb. Stock out of current revenue will be greatly enhanced.

Notice is given that, on and after Friday, the 6th day of October, 1922, definitive share certificates of the Mexican Eagle Oil Company's 7 p.c. Preference Shares will be ready for delivery at the office of the London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd., 5 Threadneedle street, London, E.C.2. Scrip certificates or letters of acceptance may be lodged at any branch of that bank, the Belfast Banking Co., Ltd., Belfast, or any of its branches.

A meeting of shareholders of the Greater Britain Insurance Corporation (in liquidation) will be held at the Cannon street Hotel, London, E.C., on Wednesday, 4th October, 1922, at 2.30 p.m., for the purpose of considering the position with regard to the proposed settlement by the Official Receiver of the "B" list of contributories and the steps to be taken for the protection of the shareholders in relation thereto.

Bann Syndicate, Ltd., was registered on September 22 as a private company, with a nominal capital of £10,000 in £1 shares, to promote a bill, or bills, in the Parliament of Northern Ireland, or any other seat of Parliament, granting permission for the supply of electrical energy, and giving authority and directions to promote, and assist in promoting, railways, tramways, hydraulic works, electric and other lighting works, or any of them, and the business of supply connected therewith, etc.

Reviewing the mining position at the quarterly meeting of the Johannesburg Chamber of Mines, Sir E. A. Wallers said that in the last three months the industry had settled down to hard efficient work. With the elimination of the shop stewards and mine committees and the restriction of trade union functions within reasonable limits, the managers had been able to devote to the efficient working of their mines much time which had previously been wasted in interminable discussions on frivolous labour disputes. The scale of operation in the gold mines was now approximately the same as before the strike.

It is stated that a new company, under the title of the Daily Mail Trust, Ltd., has been formed, with a capital of £1,600,000 in Ordinary Shares of £1 each, the whole of which has been subscribed by Lord Rothermere and his friends. Of this amount 2/- per share has been paid up, leaving 18/- per share unpaid. The Daily Mail Trust has created £1,600,000 of Seven per Cent. Debentures; they have been bought by the British, Foreign, and Colonial Corporation, Ltd., which in turn will offer them for public subscription at the end of this week. The Debentures will be secured upon the 400,000 shares in Associated Newspapers which were owned by Lord Northcliffe, on the uncalled capital of the Daily Mail Trust, Ltd., amounting to £1,440,000, and will have in addition the unconditional guarantee of the Daily Mirror Newspapers, Ltd., and Sunday Pictorial Newspapers, Ltd. The Debentures will have a life of 15 years. They will be redeemable in 10 equal drawings, beginning with the fifth year at 107. If redeemed earlier than the fifth year they will be repaid at 110. The Chairman of the Daily Mail Trust is Lord Rothermere, while the other directors will be Sir Leicester Harmsworth, Sir Hardman Lever, Sir Mayson Beeton, and Mr. F. A. Szarvasy.

Notice is given in our advertising columns that the warrants for payment of interest on the Rathmines and Rathgar 3½ per cent. Irredeemable Stock for the quarter ending October 1, 1922, will be issued to holders on application at the Town Hall, Rathmines, on and after the 2nd proximo.

UNDECIDED STOCKS.

SELLING FROM PARIS.

(FROM OUR FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT AND THE "FINANCIAL NEWS" OF TO-DAY.)

The hardening tendency which was in evidence at the close on Tuesday continued at the opening of markets on the Stock Exchange yesterday, under the influence of the somewhat better news from the Near East, particularly in respect to the reports concerning "Tino's" abdication. Later, however, quotations fell away in consequence of the paucity of business, and also owing to the fact that the Continent came in as a seller of the most interesting stocks. The Gilt-edged market was inclined to be a trifle harder under the lead of War Loan Fives and Conversion Loan. National War Bonds were also harder, as were Irish 2¾ per cent. and one or two of the India Loans. Colonial Stocks again showed little of interest. In passing, it might be mentioned that we were informed that a notice was posted up in the House to the effect that fees common to Colonial Stocks will be charged in respect of Transvaal Loans for the reason that the Bank of England has decreed that the Transvaal 3 per cent. Loan does not come under the heading of Government or Parliamentary Stocks or Funds. The tendency in Home Rails was uncertain. The market opened brightly, and prices were inclined to harden, particularly among Southern stocks, where there was some speculative buying on the coming merger possibilities. In the Foreign Railway market Argentine descriptions maintained a firm front, a batch of excellent traffic figures having the effect of a tonic. Entre Rios were also a feature of strength.

LONDON STOCKS FIRM AT OPENING.

NEGLECTED AT THE CLOSE.

The Stock markets were remarkable yesterday for the firm tone characterising the opening, due to the influence of what was considered better news from the Near East; but the feeling died away owing to the almost total absence of business. This was particularly noticeable in the semi-speculative departments. The finish was steady, but without feature of interest. The gilt-edged market was rather harder on the day, several rises being recorded. Consols rose ⅛ to 57; the 5 p.c. War Loan was firmer at 99¾, showing a rise of ⅛. The Conversion Loan also closed ⅛ higher at 72⅜. Funding at 84½ x.d. fell ⅛, and Local Loans also lost ½ at 63.

FOREIGN GOVERNMENT SECURITIES were lifeless and few changes were marked. French Loans were unchanged, but German Threes fell ⅛ to 1⅝. Egyptian Unified rose a point to 71.

The HOME RAILWAY market had a very good opening, but with no demand prices fell back to practically unchanged. South-Western Def. was at one time strong, rising to 33½, but the close found it unchanged on the day. Great Central was the only change marked, showing a rise of ¼ to 9¼.

In COLONIAL and FOREIGN RAILS there was no change in "Canpacs" or Grand Trunks, but Argentines were active. "B.A.G.S." rose ½ to 75½. Pacifics ½ to 55½, Westerns 1½ to 69, and Centrals 1½ to 66. Argentine Great Western Ord. rose 1½ to 67 and Entre Rios Ord. 2 to 17. Antofagasta Ord. fell ½ to 67, Leopoldinas 1 to 36, and San Paulo 1½ to 117½ x.d.

OIL SHARES SAGGING.

MEXICAN EAGLES WEAK.

Despite the fact that the news regarding the situation in the Near East was of a more favourable character, business in most sections of the Stock Exchange yesterday were of an extremely quiet character. The Oil Share market, in fact, was stated by dealers to be even more idle than recently, public interest being almost non-existent, while professional operators observed a cautious attitude, and, with business virtually at a standstill, prices generally sagged. The only really weak spot among the leading descriptions was Mexican Eagles, and in the case of these shares the heavy tone was attributable rather to selling on Paris account than to local pressure. Other leading shares again moved within narrow limits, Shells being a fairly steady market, although the final quotation showed a small loss, and Royal Dutch also gave way in the absence of demand. Burmahs, however, maintained a steady tone, and Anglo-Persian Ord. had an improving tendency. Trinidad issues were neglected, but, in common with the rest of the markets, Apex and Centrals finished lower. Rumanians commanded only a small amount of attention, and shrinkages were recorded in Rumanian Consolidated and Phœnix. In other directions, some cautious selling of Agwi Petroleum shares was noticeable, and Kern Rivers were offered to a moderate extent and gave way. Closing prices:—

RUBBER SHARES STRONG.

The Rubber share market continued to improve, and business was almost in a boom state. Many rises were made, the tone generally being very strong. Anglo-Malay rose 2s. 1½d. to 18s. 9d. Damansara at 14s. 3d. showed a gain of 3s. 3d., Kuala Lumpur advanced 5s. 10½d. to 36s. 10½d., Ledbury at 17s. 6d. gained 2s. 3d., and Linggi at 25s. 3d. rose 2s. 6d. Malacca Pref. rose 5s. to 30s., Telogoredjo gained 3s. 9d. at 31s. 3d., and United Sua Betong rose 2s. 6d. to 45s. There were many other improvements. Falls were few. LONDON MINING MARKET DULL.

UNBROKEN LIST OF FALLS.

Nervousness was again general in the House yesterday, and business in all departments continued on a very modest scale. Investment orders were checked by the development in the political situation, and speculative activity seemed to have almost entirely disappeared. The Mining market, therefore, occupied a very unimportant position, and, as regards Kaffirs, it is something of a mystery that the highly satisfactory reports recently issued as to the position of the industry have failed to attract either speculators or investors. The fact that the Jewish holidays are in progress may have something to do with the contraction of operations, but cannot be held to be solely responsible for the dulness. As a matter of fact, speculative interest seems to have completely dried up, and, in spite of the encouraging outlook, buyers continue to hold aloof. At the same time real sellers, especially of good class shares, are difficult to discover, and bear operations are conducted with extreme caution. The influence in Paris is important, and there is no doubt that the approach of the end September account, when large options fall due, is partly responsible for the slackening of interest there. After a firm opening the market gradually developed a sagging tendency, and at the close the list presented an almost unbroken array of small shrinkages. There was a fair amount of business passing in Rhodesians, but it was of a somewhat ragged character. Chartered were unaltered, but Cam and Motor receded, while Gaika moved up, and there were some sharp fluctuations in Selukwe. A couple of the Eastern Tin shares were inquired for, and hardened, but dealings in this section generally were almost at a standstill, while among West Africans a fall in Akim was to some extent off-set by a rally in Obbuassi. Among Australians, one or two Barriers were easier on the news of further labour troubles, but British were unaffected by the announcement of the commencement of legal proceedings for the abrogation of the agreement with the Broken Hill Associated Smelters, this step having been foreshadowed at the last annual meeting. Miscellaneous descriptions were idle. Closing prices:—

DIVIDENDS AND REPORTS.

ADOLPH FRANKAU.—Dividend due 1st October on Preference shares will not be paid.

NEW JAGERSFONTEIN MINING AND EXPLORATION CO.—Interim dividend of 2/6 per share for the half-year.

KERN RIVER OIL.—Final dividend for the year of 10 per cent., less tax, making, with the interim dividend of 7½ per cent. paid in April last, 17½ per cent. for the year.

PAHANG PARA RUBBER.—For year ended 30th April loss on trading was £1,620, less £369 brought in, leaving debit to profit and loss of £1,251 carried forward.

IMPERIAL CONTINENTAL GAS ASSOCIATION.—Interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. actual on the capital stock, less tax. The board has decided to revert to their pre-war practice of paying two equal half-yearly dividends.

VAN DEN BERGHS.—The account shows a balance of £106,964 0/2, which the directors propose should be carried forward, and they do not recommend the payment of a dividend on the Ordinary shares.

INDUSTRIALS STAGNANT.

PRICES MOVE WITHIN NARROW LIMITS.

Operators in the Miscellaneous and Industrial markets experienced an extremely quiet day yesterday, stagnant conditions ruling practically throughout. Prices generally moved within narrow limits, and where lower levels were seen, it was purely a case of sagging in the absence of support.

A demand sprang up for Illingworth Morris, and the shares rose from 17s. to 19s. 3d., at which they finished 2s. 3d. higher on the day. Courtaulds fluctuated within narrow limits, and after being easier at one time, finished unchanged at 54s. 6d. Cellulose Pref. met with some support and rose to 8s. 6d., and the Ord. kept firm at 5s. Amalgamated Cottons improved to 15s. 3d. Exceptionally Slubbers gave way to 8s. 3d. In the Stores department, Harrods put on 6d. to 28s. 6d., and T.B.A. shares stiffened to 8s. 9d. J. Lyons fell back to 4⅝ on a little profit-taking, and Aerated Breads eased to 35s. 3d. Liptons kept at 27s. Van den Berghs still ruled at 15/16, being unaffected by the report. In the Brewery list, Walker Cain Debs. rose 1 to 102, though Ind Coope 5 p.c. prior lien Debs. lost that much at 88½ x.d. Carlton Hotels gained 1/16 at ⅝ among hotels. Land shares had a firm appearance. Sudan Plantations rose another 1/16 to 4½. Dunlops strengthened to 8s. 9d. in the miscellaneous trading section and the A Prefs. kept firm at 16s. 6d. Oil Cake came on offer, and fell 9d. to 24s. 3d., though Lever 8 p.c. Prefs. held their ground at 19s. 9d. The 7 p.c. firmed up to that level. Arghans slipped back to 6s. 3d. British and Argentine Meats eased to 31s. 9d., but Nelson Bros. kept at 34s. The Marconi issues all closed without quotable alteration in the Wireless group, but among Cables, Anglo A. fell ¼ to 23½, and the B shares ¼ to 102. Among Tobacco descriptions, B.A.T.'s closed 1s. lower at 86s., but Imperials showed no quotable alteration at 68s. 9d., and Canadians kept at 22s. Rolls Royce came into demand in the Motor group, and rose 10½d. to 1 5/16, but otherwise scarcely any movement occurred. In the Banking section, Hong Kong and Shanghai fell ½ to 114, and Anglo South Americans and L.C.W. and Parr's both fell 1/16 to 9 5/16 and 17 1/16, respectively. On the other hand, Barclays A strengthened to 7⅞. Irregularity ruled among Insurances. In the Iron and Steel department, Ebbw Vales recovered to 11s. 6d., though the Prefs. further receded to 13s. 6d. Sheffield Steels weakened to 1s. 6d. The Prefs. relapsed to 5s., and the Debs. to 75. Vickers and the tax free Prefs. both sagged to 12s. and 16s. respectively as a result of absence of support. Bengals fell 6d. to £1, and Guest Keens also lost that much at 34s. 6d. South Durhams failed to maintain the previous days advance, and slipped back to 2 1/16. Tata Debs. further recovered to 94. The only noticeable alteration among Coal stocks was a fall of 6d. in Wm. Cory to 44s. 9d. In the Ammunition group, Nobels Industries hardened to 15s. 9d. Shipping issues left off without change on balance.

COMPANY MEETING.

ANANTAPUR GOLDFIELD.

The seventeenth ordinary general meeting was held yesterday at 6 Queen street place, London, E.C., Lt.-Col. Sir Donald Robertson, K.C.S.I., presiding. The Chairman said that the income for the year ended 31st March last, derived from dividends, interest, rents, etc., amounted to £2,244, and the expenditure to £738, leaving a credit balance of £1,503. The company held 30,218 fully-paid Ordinary shares of £1 each and 627 fully-paid Preference shares of £1 each in the North Anantapur Gold Mines, and also 353 fully-paid Preference shares of 10s. each in the Jibutil Anantapur Gold Mines. At the 31st March last the company had a balance of £14,261. A syndicate had been registered under the title of Anglo-Canadian Explorers, Ltd., with a nominal capital of £65,000 in shares of £1 each, and the Anantapur Gold Fields, Ltd., had subscribed for 5,000 shares. The company was formed for the purpose of investigating and exploring mining properties in Canada, with a view to dealing with such of them as offered sufficient promise. Certain areas were under offer and being examined by the company's technical men, and the board had strong hopes of the enterprise meeting with success. The report was unanimously adopted.

IMPORTATION OF LIVE STOCK.

NEW LANDING ARRANGEMENTS

Owing to the improvement in the foot-and-mouth disease position in England, and provided that no further outbreak occurs in Great Britain in the meantime, the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction (Ireland) have decided to allow, as from the 2nd proximo, the landing in the 26-county area of ruminants and swine from Great Britain, on the authority of Departmental permits obtained beforehand.

Intending importers will be required to submit to the Department, in the first instance, on the forms prescribed, particulars of the animals, and declarations, together with a certificate by a veterinary surgeon as to the health of the animals, and of the herds or flocks with which they have been associated.

The necessary forms can be obtained on application to the offices of the Veterinary Branch of the Department at 50 and 51 Upper Mount street, Dublin. Such applications should mention the class, or classes, of animals it is desired to import, as well as the purpose for which the importation is intended.

LONDON METALS MARKET.

TIN—Market easier about 7/6 per ton on balance against the close of Tuesday, but a liberal trade ensued. Cash quoted £160 17/6 to £161, three months £162 2/6 to £162 5/-, settlement price £161. Fainting while on sentry duty near the main gate of Buckingham Palace on Monday evening, Private G. Brown, of the Welsh Guards, fell on his bayonet, which cut his face just below the right eye. His injury is not serious.

Eleven persons were drowned and twenty-two injured when a char-à-banc with thirty-three passengers overturned while crossing a bridge near Belluno, Northern Italy, and fell into a stream.

THE MONEY MARKET.

LOANABLE CREDITS EASIER

FOREIGN EXCHANGES WEAK.

No further borrowing was necessary at the Bank of England on the part of Lombard street, where money conditions were comfortable to firm, with little business going on in discounts. There was quite a good inquiry for loans over the end of the month, for which 2½-¾ was asked, while night money was worth 2 p.c. upwards, with fixtures going on at 1½ as a rule, there being exceptions here and there.

Bank Rate (Discount) changed July 13, 1922, 3%

4 months „ .... 2⅛ 2¼% | „ 3 3½%
6 months „ .... 2⅜ 2½% | „ 3¼ 3¾%
Loans to brokers day-to-day 2¼ 1½%
„ for a week 2½ 1¾%
Deposit allowance: Banks at call .... 1 %
„ „ Discount houses, at call .... 1 %
„ „ at notice 1¼%

Inactivity still prevailed in discounts. One of the banks was inquiring for November Treasuries, and succeeded in getting a fair quantity at 2¼ p.c., while early December were 2¼-5/16. There was still an absence of buyers for the new "hot" Treasuries, which were offering at 2 5/16. Fine three months' bank bills, usually quoted 2 5/16-⅜, were subjected to a special inquiry on the part of buyers willing to take them at 2¼ in preference to end of the year Treasury bills. Very few were to be obtained.

Gold remained at 93s. 5d. per oz. Bar silver was 1/16d. easier for spot at 35 1/16d. per oz., but unchanged for forward delivery at 35¼d. per oz.

Depression prevailed in the foreign exchange market yesterday, the political news not being liked, while the reported difficulties of Belgium in discounting the German reparation Treasury bills had some effect. Particular weakness was shown by sterling on New York, which was no better than 4.40½, while German marks mounted to 7,200, compared with Tuesday's closing rate of 6,400. French francs were comparatively steady at 57.94-57.99, while Belgian was 61.45-61.50 and Italy 103-103½. Greek drachmae, on the news from the country, were 193-196, while Austrian crowns were rather better at 315,000-325,000 on the possibility of help being rendered to the country. Polish marks were heavy at 37,000-39,000. Strength was shown by Dutch florins, which were 11.36-11.37, and Swedish kroner cheapened to 16.70-16.72, Norway being 26.00-26.05. Rupees were quiet at 1s. 3 11/32d.-1s. 3 7/16d., while Chilian pesoe moved up to 31.60, Brazil still being depressed at 6⅜-6 13/32. The following are closing quotations:—

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday.—WHEAT—Higher quotations from America and easier rates of sterling exchange caused a slight improvement on speculative positions of wheat here during the early trading, but afterwards gave way on better political news and absence of support, finishing over worst point, though marking a slight decline on the day. C.i.f. parcels No. 1 Manitoba afloat sold 46/6, September 46/6, 15th October 46/6 to Liverpool, and No. 1 Manitoba September at 46/6; No. 2 hard winter September 46/- per qr. to Manchester. C.i.f. parcels MAIZE American mixed afloat and September sold 33/9, 15th October Northern ports 33/3, with River Plate afloat quoted 38/9 per qr. Wheat on the spot quietly steady at yesterday's market currencies. Maize—Spot parcels firm, and held for ½d. advance, with American mixed quoted 7/6½ to 7/7, River Plate 8/10 to 8/10½ per cental. FLOUR steady at late rates. Graded red wheat futures opened unchanged for December, improved ½d., but afterwards gave way until ½d. under last night had been received. Later on a partial recovery followed, the market closing steady, ½d. per cental lower on the day. September nominal. Sales—70 loads at 9/4, 9/4½, 9/3¾, 9/3⅞ for December delivery. Closing values—September nominal, December 9/3¾ per cental. Maize options nominal.

PROVISIONS.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday.—BACON—Chicago cables showed a partial decline in value of live hogs, but speculative products in some cases dearer, though large arrivals of bacon are entered into this port. The market shows little new feature, however, in the bacon position, holders remaining steady to firm, with the demand still on only moderate consumptive lines at about late rates. American Wiltshires exceptionally being easier at 100/- to 110/- per cwt. Bellies again attracted chief attention, with Cumberlands in small compass. HAMS firm and generally dearer, with a fair demand for short cut at 100/- to 104/-, while extra skinned are held higher at 112/- to 117/- per cwt. Shoulders quietly steady for squares and New Yorks, but picnics again move fairly at the recent advance. Canadian Wiltshires are further reduced to 130/- to 140/- owing to the easiness in Irish and Continental, though latter selections show no further change. LARD on the spot in fair demand, and, despite heavy arrivals, prime steam is held for a further 6d. per cwt. advance. CHEESE firm and fairly active at late rates. BUTTER also firm, and Danish tends against buyers at 226/- to 228/- per cwt. EGGS firm, and Irish hen raised to 23/- to 24/6 per 120, with duck nominal.

PATRICK KEHOE, LTD., Irish Bacon Curers and Lard Refiners, Importers of American Provisions. (Estd. 100 years)—103 FRANCIS ST., DUBLIN. (Advt.)

DUBLIN WHOLESALE VEGETABLE, Wednesday.—The usual small mid-week supply of vegetables was readily cleared around the following prices:—York cabbage 22/- to 29/- per load; damsons 6/- to 12/- per keg and 4/- to 6/- per box; apples 7/- to 11/6 per barrel.

DUBLIN WHOLESALE POTATO, Wednesday.—A fair supply of potatoes offering, but demand was slow, and prices run at 4/- to 4/6 and 5/- per cwt. for best table qualities.

DUBLIN WHOLESALE FISH, Wednesday.—The very limited quantity of fish on market was readily disposed of—namely, 2 chests lobsters and some small consignments from country boats. Prices:—Large lobsters 40/- to 45/- per 13, seconds 25/- to 30/-, and smalls 10/- to 15/-; turbot 10/- to 20/- each; brill 5/- to 6/- each; large soles 40/- to 50/-, medium 25/- to 30/-, and slips 12/- to 17/6 per nine pairs; ray 30- per half-box.

BILLINGSGATE FISH, Wednesday.—Supply fair; demand quieter. DUBLIN AND THE PROVINCES.

NEWS FROM ALL PARTS.

DUBLIN.

SMASHED SHOP WINDOW.—William Brennan, described as of no fixed address, was charged at Dublin Police Court yesterday with loitering in Francis street, with having broken a shop window valued at £1, and stealing a packet of raisins and other goods. He pleaded guilty, and was sent to jail for a month.

TRAVELLING WITHOUT A TICKET.—Michael Garry was charged in Dublin Police Court yesterday with travelling on the Great Southern and Western Railway line from Curragh to Kingsbridge, without a ticket, and with refusing to give his name and address. He was fined 5s., with £1 6s. costs, in the first case, and 10s., with 10s. 6d. costs, in the second.

LEINSTER.

GORED BY A BULL.—Ambrose Gregory, farmer, Mosstown, Dunleer, Co. Louth, was seriously gored by a bull. Mathew McKeown, who went to his assistance, was also attacked, but a collie caught the bull by the nose, and McKeown escaped. Gregory was removed to hospital.

MUNSTER.

CORK BOROUGH SESSIONS.—The Recorder of Cork is again sitting, and in the Borough Sessions the list includes 109 criminal injury applications, arising out of recent disturbances, and amounting to £156,655. Mr. D. J. Galvin, solicitor to the Cork Corporation, said that the Corporation in opposing all these claims did not wish to mislead anybody into thinking that they admitted any liability on the part of the ratepayers of Cork to compensation for the damage. It was quite impossible that the compensation should come from any other source than Government Funds, and it was really to assist claimants and assist the Government in dealing with these claims afterwards, that the Corporation were represented.

LATE DR. RICHARD DALTON.—Dr. Richard Dalton died in a private hospital in Cork on Sunday evening. He was a well known physician and a member of a prominent city family. He filled various important appointments here, being President of the Cork Medical and Surgical Society and Assistant Pathologist at University College Cork. He married a descendant of the famous Irishman, playwright and author, Richard Brindsley Sheridan.

CHAPLAIN APPOINTMENT.—The Rev. Joseph Scannell, of Farranferris Seminary, Cork, has been appointed Chaplain to the national forces in Cork by the Roman Catholic Bishop of Cork. Dr. Scannell, who has always taken a keen interest in the Legion of Ex-Service Men, was a chaplain in the war, and was awarded the Military Cross.

ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT DESTROYED.—Last week armed men broke into the Bantry Electric Power House and demolished all the machinery there, with the result that the town is now without light. The damage done is considerable, and will take months to replace.

ULSTER.

THE PEOPLE MUST PAY.—Donegal County Council has instructed its solicitor to defend all malicious injury claims made at Quarter Sessions. The Irish Local Government Inspector said that, whether the awards were made a local or a national charge, the people would have to pay. Some of the claims were exaggerated, and should be contested. Mr. McGoldrich, M.P., said that it would probably devolve on the County Court Judge to determine how much should be a local and how much a national charge.

NURSES' RESIGNATIONS.—Londonderry Infirmary Board on Tuesday had a report from the Matron that two of the staff nurses had resigned. It was stated that 84 nurses had been either dismissed or had left the institution in the last three years. A member said it was very peculiar that these resignations should be going on continuously. There must be something radically wrong when they had so many resignations, and an inquiry ought to be held into the matter. The Chairman said that they could do nothing now as the nurses had gone.

DR. HONEYFORD'S HEALTH.—It was reported to a meeting of the Londonderry Infirmary Board that the surgeon in charge, Dr. Honeyford, had been certified by an Edinburgh specialist as on the eve of a mental and physical breakdown. He should take a holiday for at least six months. The Committee granted Dr. Honeyford one month's leave.

STARVATION IN DONEGAL.—At the meeting of the Donegal County Council on Tuesday complaint was made of the manner in which the grant of £10,000 for the relief of distress in the county was allocated. The secretary said that the Irish Local Government Department's engineer who drafted the schemes was receiving messages that people were dying of starvation in the county, and his desire was to hurry on the work. The engineer's scheme was approved.

The death of Mrs. Mary Hope, Gortlandstown, Mullingar, has taken place at the age of 102 years.

James J. Hamilton, 11 years, son of Mr. Moore Hamilton, Elerghmore, near Londonderry, was accidentally killed by a reaping machine on Tuesday.

Clogher (Co. Tyrone) Presbytery has approved of a proposal that a Waldensian deputy give a Waldensian Service to Belfast Italians when next the deputies visit the General Assembly.

FATHER MATHEW UNION.

DISREGARD OF LICENSING LAW DEPLORED.

Very Rev. Canon Lyons, P.P., V.G., Ardee, occupied the chair at the annual meeting of Father Mathew Union, held yesterday at the Mansion House, Dublin.

It appeared from the Hon. Secretary's report that there was a membership of, roughly, 1,000 total abstaining priests, a substantial increase since last year. Reference was made to communications which passed between the Hon. Secretary and the Government relating to drink abuses throughout the country, and it was mentioned that owing to prevailing conditions proposed diocesan congresses, with the exception of one held with success under the presidency of His Eminence Cardinal Logue at Armagh, could not take place.

On the motion of the Rev. Fr. Flinn, seconded by Rev. Fr. Lavelle, a resolution was passed "deploring the wide-spread disregard of the licensing regulations, and the consequent increase in drunkenness throughout the country," and appointing a deputation to urge upon the Government in Ireland's best interests the need of immediate action "to enforce the existing regulations and to devise the further preventative measures plainly necessary."

It was suggested that the Civic Guard, about to be commissioned to maintain law and order, should have strongly impressed upon them by their authorities the necessity for effective supervision of liquor traffic.

Rev. E. Flinn, S.J., Gardiner street, in the course of an interesting paper on "The Spiritual Aspect of Temperance Work," advised total abstainers to make use of every argument, medical, social, economic, patriotic, and religious, relying mainly on the supernatural element in their efforts for temperance.

A cordial vote of thanks was passed to Father Flinn.

A strong appeal was directed to be addressed to diocesan branches of the Union to actively assist in perfecting the organisation of branches of the Catholic Total Abstinence Federation in view of the triennial congress to be held next Easter.

TRAMWAY WAGES DISPUTE.

HOPE OF SETTLEMENT.

There is new hope of a settlement of the English tramwaymen's wages dispute. When the Union's delegates from all over the country met at the Essex Hall, Strand, yesterday, to hear a report from the representatives on the National Joint Council, they were told that the negotiations were still going on, and that the prospect was hopeful. The employers' attitude, it is reported, has undergone a modification.

EBBW VALE DISPUTE.

A Newport Correspondent of the Press Association telegraphs:—Following the decision of the South Wales Miners' Federation officials to take over absolute control of the negotiations in connection with the Ebbw Vale dispute, Mr. T. Richards, General Secretary, states that he is communicating immediately with the Company for the purpose of opening negotiations. Mr. W. L. Cook, Ministry of Mines representative, was present at the conference, and is believed to have greatly influenced the decision yesterday. The Company have agreed to meet the Steel Workers' representative to discuss the position, and a spirit of optimism prevails.

MESSRS. GANLY SONS AND CO.'S SHEEP SALE REPORT.

Messrs. Ganly, Sons and Co.'s weekly autumn sheep sales were continued on Tuesday in the Dublin Cattle Market, when about 3,000 sheep of the various breeds of store ewes, wethers, and lambs were offered. There was a fair attendance of buyers, and competition was similar to last week's. The following prices were realised:—Roscommon ewes, 84/- to 75/-; Galway ewes, 80/- to 71/-; Cheviot and Wicklow Mountain ewes, from 63/- to 58/-. A consignment of 800 blackfaced Scotch horny ewes from Abel Buckley's Galtee Mountain flock realised from 48/- to 42/-; other lots of horny ewes, 39/- to 34/-. Lord Lismore's draft of 100 crossbred lambs made from 57/- to 44/-. A small number of Roscommon and Galway wethers made 85/-; Cheviot wethers, 60/-; blackfaced horny wethers, 37/6 to 33/-. Messrs. Between January 1 and September 20 the Swiss Customs duties yielded a total of £4,353,280, compared with £2,422,800 during the corresponding period of 1921. Imports have been decreasing, so that the increase of Customs revenue is chiefly due to the rise in the Customs duties.

POSSESSION OF A HOUSE.
LANDLORD'S APPLICATION REFUSED.

At a Parish Court at Ballsbridge last night, James Geoghegan, 1 Thorncastle street, Ringsend, applied for recovery of possession of the house 4 Seapoint terrace, Irishtown, occupied by Herbert T. Bartlett, tenant.

Mr. Sean O h-Uadhaigh (Little, Doyle, and O h-Uadhaigh, solicitors) appeared for the defendant. The plaintiff was represented by Mr. P. O'Reilly, solicitor.

Mr. Geoghegan stated in evidence that his three grown-up daughters had to sleep in one room, and in order to get to his own room he had to pass through theirs. He had offered defendant his house in exchange, and had shown him through it.

In reply to Mr. O h-Uadhaigh, plaintiff stated that he was receiving a rent of 14s. per week from the defendant. He was prepared to rent him his own house at the same rate, although he could get £1 per week for it.

Evidence was given that defendant's house contained four bedrooms, a sittingroom, and a kitchen. Plaintiff's house contained a smaller number of rooms, and there were only two bed rooms.

Mr. O h-Uadhaigh asked for a dismissal on the evidence. Defendant's house contained more house than the plaintiff's, and was a better house. He contended that there was no reasonable alternative accommodation offered.

The Court dismissed the case, with costs.

CANADIAN CATTLE EXPORTS.
(SPECIAL CABLE.)

MONTREAL, September 27.

Though trade is still very slow values have increased, choice cattle making $7.75 to $8.00, with good grades $7.25 to $7.50. Freights have dropped away to $20.00 per head. Sailings—To Liverpool, per Concordia, 393 cattle; to Glasgow per Gracia, 154 cattle. Total—547 cattle.

The Rome Aero Club has offered a prize of twenty thousand lire (£200) for motorless air flying.

The work of cleaning and repairing the top of St. Paul's Cathedral, which had occupied about a dozen expert workmen and scaffolders for two summers, has been completed. Owing to the strong winds the work was too hazardous to be done in winter.
